BEIRUT DECLARATION

THE REGION OF WESTERN ASIA
PREPARING FOR THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

We the representatives of the Governments of the member States of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, meeting in Beirut on 27 and 28 May 1999 for the twentieth session of the Commission and gathered here today to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary,

Acting in accordance with the desire of our Governments to fulfil their responsibility to realize the aspirations of their peoples towards integrated, sustainable development; stressing their unique character and their contributions to civilization; believing in the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations; being aware of the development of international relations and partnerships; and acting on the experience and lessons of the past, understanding the present and its dimensions, and looking confidently to the future,

Taking the opportunity offered by the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission,

Present our vision of the role and tasks of the Commission in the light of regional and world developments in the coming century, as follows:

1. The growth of globalism does not diminish or detract from the extreme importance of action at the regional level, nor does the global nature of problems preclude area-specific solutions and policies. In the trend towards globalism—with full respect for the sovereignty of States—regionalism cannot be bypassed. Cooperative arrangements within homogeneous groups, especially of small and medium-sized countries, represent a bridge between the national and the global. Moreover, development trends and requirements do not materialize all at once throughout the world, but rather in the form of regional waves, in which the conditions and situations peculiar to each area must be taken into account.

2. The role and functions of the Commission are based primarily on development and economic and social cooperation, the object being to raise the level of economic activity in Western Asia and to maintain and strengthen economic relations between member countries and other countries of the world. Development can be achieved only to the extent that it is comprehensive, integrated and sustainable in both the economic and social spheres.

3. Recognition of the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of States, non-interference in their internal affairs and settlement of disputes by peaceful means in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law constitute the basis of a sound international community. However, no State is capable of achieving comprehensive, sustainable development unless there exists international cooperation in the economic and social fields that is founded, on the one hand, on just and comprehensive peace, security on equal terms and respect for the principles of justice and international law and, on the other hand, on international relations that are balanced in all areas and based on effective international cooperation and a genuine sense of partnership on the part of donor States and international donor institutions.
4. The increasing importance of regional cooperation in the economic and social spheres places a great responsibility on the Commission. As part of the United Nations system, the Commission is the natural place for dealing with issues related to such cooperation, for it is not merely a regional arrangement for expressing the needs and particularities of the region to which it belongs, but also the embodiment, at the regional level, of the universal purposes and principles set forth in the Charter and resolutions of the United Nations.

5. The future fulfilment of the region’s potential, on the threshold of the twenty-first century, requires its transformation into a zone of economic and social cooperation and mutual respect of all for the rights and interests of the peoples of the region in an atmosphere of peace both just and comprehensive, security based on equality, and economic and social stability. These goals can be achieved only if cooperation is strengthened between the members of the Commission, the United Nations and international financial institutions and the following objective conditions are met:

(a) The achievement of a just and comprehensive peace, security on equal terms and stability in the region of Western Asia through the implementation of the relevant United Nations resolutions, and full respect for international legitimacy and the foundations and principles of the peace process, foremost among them the principle of land for peace and respect for the rights and legitimate aspirations of peoples;

(b) The creation of an environment that will stimulate economic and social cooperation and development in all domains, including cooperation between the countries of the region in the areas of water, environment and energy, which calls for a comprehensive view that takes into account the balancing of national needs and global requirements and is based on the integration of the various aspects of sustainable human development, with recognition of the mutually supportive roles of an effective State administration, an efficient private sector and a sound civil society;

(c) The exertion of efforts to integrate the ESCWA member countries into the international economic and trading system by assisting them in dealing with the rules and principles on which it is based and maximizing the advantages and at the same time limiting the drawbacks that might be involved, through the establishment of a dialogue with the international organizations concerned;

(d) The promotion of democracy and respect for human rights, including the right to life, the right of self-determination and the right to development, and for fundamental freedoms within a context of respect for national and regional characteristics and different religious, cultural and historical values. Achieving complementarity between freedom and responsibility at all levels in a State based on institutions and law constitutes a fundamental guarantee that will enable the region to continue its creative participation in the civilization of humankind;

(e) The development of the role of the Commission through support for its subsidiary bodies and adequate support from the United Nations system, including the financial and human resources needed to enable the Commission to conduct its activities as effectively as possible so that it may bolster the efforts of the member countries and become a basic economic and social forum for promoting regional economic cooperation on a sound basis, thereby helping to strengthen development and progress among the ESCWA member countries.

10. Date and venue of the twenty-first session of the Commission.

B. OPENING OF THE SESSION

13. The opening meeting of the session was held under the patronage of the President of Lebanon, General Emile Lahoud, who was represented at the meeting by the Prime Minister of Lebanon, Mr. Salim Hoss. Attending the session on behalf of the Secretary-General of the United Nations was his Special Representative, Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi.

14. The Executive Secretary of the Commission, Mr. Hazem El-Beblawi, delivered a statement in which he thanked the Government and people of Lebanon for providing a handsome building to serve as the headquarters of the Commission and the home of the United Nations. He also expressed his sincere gratitude to the member States that had contributed financially towards facilitating the relocation of ESCWA to its new headquarters, in particular the Governments of Lebanon, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. He renewed his thanks and appreciation to the Governments of Iraq and Jordan for acting as hosts to the Commission in Baghdad and Amman and expressed the hope that the Commission’s return to Beirut augured the return of peace and stability to the region so that the Commission might assist it in pursuing its course of building and giving.

15. The Executive Secretary drew attention to the significance of the historic moment at which the session was being held, coinciding as it did with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission. The previous quarter of a century, he said, had been rich in events and developments and had at the same time abounded in crises and difficulties. It had witnessed the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the cold war. He referred to the recent technological revolution in the field of information and communications that had swept through the world, saying that the new inventions were moving the world towards globalization and a new reality that included opportunities and possibilities, but at the same time perils and challenges. He went on to review the conditions that had prevailed in the region over the previous 25 years, from a promising state of growth and abundance to the faltering of the peace process, a drop in raw materials prices and, in many countries of the region, a decline in income.

16. In view of all of those global and regional developments, it was essential to pause and examine the past and to prepare for a future in which things would be different. In accordance with the request of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General, ESCWA had called for the holding of a regional conference to examine the problems of the region and its role in the next century.

17. The Executive Secretary emphasized the important role of regionalism as a link between the national and the global in the light of the trend towards increased globalization. ESCWA, as a regional commission, enjoyed a twofold advantage, for it was able to deal with geo-economic problems with a maximum of impartiality and professional commitment while upholding the universal values enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, thus ensuring regional development in full harmony with the principles and objectives of the international community.

18. In connection with defining a clear vision of the future of the region in keeping with its heritage and its gifts to civilization, the Executive Secretary stressed that peace and security, comprehensive development, democracy and respect for human rights were not merely goals pursued by the United Nations, but the basis of the future stability of the region. Peace was the basis of international cooperation, and it would not prevail or abide in the region unless it was a comprehensive peace on all fronts and a just peace for all concerned. Together with peace and security it was essential to exalt human dignity, he said, emphasizing that the encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without discrimination, was one of the fundamental purposes of the United Nations. It had become an incontestable fact that democracy and respect for human rights played a fundamental role in the promotion of peace and development alike.

19. Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi read out a message from Mr. Kofi Annan, in which the Secretary-General mentioned the Commission’s many travels and relocations and expressed sincere thanks on the part of the United Nations to Iraq and Jordan for their generosity as hosts to the Commission as well as heartfelt gratitude to the Government of Lebanon for providing ESCWA with a new headquarters and to the member States that had helped finance the relocation of ESCWA to that headquarters.

20. In his message, the Secretary-General stated that ESCWA played a key role in coordinating the activities carried out by United Nations entities throughout the region. He said that the Commission was uniquely qualified to assist the member States in dealing with emerging geo-economic and other challenges and concerns in the region and to complement other regional groupings.

21. The Secretary-General said that the studies carried out by ESCWA in crucial areas such as population, human development and the advancement of women benefited the United Nations and the region alike. He alluded to the Commission’s annual Survey of Economic and Social Developments in the ESCWA Region, which, he said, represented a prodigious endeavour that the United Nations was proud to publish.

22. He said that ESCWA was active in providing technical assistance on the ground, with regular visits by its experts and advisers to the member States to provide technical guidance and know-how in fields such as statistics and national accounts, social development, technology, environment, energy and telecommunications. In view of the vital importance of the issue of water for all the countries of the region, ESCWA was expected to play an ever-greater role in that field as well.

23. The Secretary-General also said in his message that ESCWA was playing a key role in the creation of an integrated transport system linking the countries of the region, thus facilitating intraregional trade and promoting greater economic integration in the region; such a system would also connect the countries of the region with neighbouring regions and further integrate them into the world economy. He referred to the commitment of the United Nations, since its inception, to the achievement of peace and also to its commitment to Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973) and 425 (1978), which still remained the framework for all efforts towards achieving peace.

24. He commended the role played by UNRWA, in spite of the shortage of funds, in alleviating the suffering of Palestinian refugees; its services in the fields of education, health care and relief for millions of refugees; and its promotion of the economic and social development of the occupied territories. He appealed to donor States to be generous in offering much-needed resources to the Agency.

25. The Secretary-General concluded his statement by saying that when he had visited the new ESCWA building, he could see the gateway to a promising future for the entire region—a future he hoped could be built with the help of the United Nations.

26. He pledged that the United Nations would do all it could to help promote peace and development in the region.

27. The Prime Minister of Lebanon, Mr. Salim Hoss, delivered a statement in which he welcomed all those present to Lebanon for the twentieth session of ESCWA. He emphasized the desire of the Government and people of Lebanon to restore the country’s role as a cultural beacon and a focus of cooperation among the countries of the region. Such was the role of Lebanon: thus had it been in the past and thus would it be in the future.

28. For the region, the previous quarter of a century had been an extraordinarily difficult period marked by extreme contradictions, one in which elements of hope and optimism had been combined with frustration and regression. It had been a period during which phenomenal financial possibilities had emerged and the first glimmers of peace had appeared on the remote horizon, yet also a period that had witnessed wars, a subsequent setback in the peace process and a decline in revenues. Changes had taken place in the world’s physiognomy, including a decline in the importance of frontiers, the removal of barriers and the fall of the Berlin wall. The world had become like a fast train: whoever missed it was left behind and completely forgotten. It was a world that cared only about the powerful, in which there was no room for the weak or the retiring, a world ruled by the law of competition and efficiency in which timid, faint echoes of compassion and justice reverberated from afar, more akin to nostalgia for the past than an expression of the realities of the age.

29. After all the country had suffered in recent years, the Government of Lebanon was making every effort to proceed at full speed with the process of building and reconstruction within a framework of economic discipline, in a State governed by institutions and the rule of law.

30. The Prime Minister emphasized that Lebanon, being desirous of ensuring the necessary controls and guarantees for building and reconstruction, remained faithful to its principles and its traditions, in particular economic freedom. The various aspects of that freedom, especially support for private enterprise, respect for property, the free transfer of funds, the guaranteeing of investments, the soundness of financial institutions and adherence to recognized banking practices, were firmly established traditions that Lebanon had maintained at all times, even when conditions had been at their most difficult and their most savage.

31. While Lebanon could live only in freedom, it would thrive only with regional and international cooperation; there could be no future for a Lebanon turned in on itself and isolated from the Arab environment and the global environment.
C. MAIN TOPICS OF DISCUSSION AND RESULTS

1. Implementation of resolution 217 (XIX), “Call for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, to be held in 1999 in conjunction with its twentieth session, and discussion of the role of the Commission in the coming century in view of global and regional developments”
(Agenda item 4)

32. The Commission adopted the text of the draft declaration entitled “The region of Western Asia: preparing for the twenty-first century” (Beirut declaration) (E/ESCWA/C.1/20/5/Add.6/Rev.4), subject to the reservation expressed by the Iraqi delegation concerning the content of paragraph 5(a), beginning: “The achievement of a just and comprehensive peace ...”.

2. Discussion and adoption of the final report of the Technical Committee on its eleventh session
(Agenda item 5)

33. The Executive Secretary gave a brief presentation on the activities of the Commission and presented the report of the Technical Committee (E/ESCWA/20/4) for discussion by the representatives of the member countries. No observations were made regarding the report, which was adopted as submitted. In addition, seven resolutions were adopted in the form in which they appear at the beginning of the present report.

3. The role of ESCWA in the coordination of the regional activities of the United Nations system

34. The Executive Secretary gave a brief presentation of the document relevant to the agenda item (E/ESCWA/20/5). He drew attention to the increasing importance of coordination and the avoidance of duplication owing to the scantness of available financial resources. He explained the mechanisms agreed upon for achieving that coordination: the UNDP Resident Representative in each country was responsible for United Nations activities at the national level; at the global level, there was an organ presided over by the Secretary-General that included the heads of United Nations agencies throughout the world; and regionally, the task of coordination was undertaken by the regional commissions. Regional meetings chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General had been held at the headquarters of the five regional commissions to discuss systems of coordination between the various United Nations entities. The first such meeting had been held in the ESCWA region in March 1999. At that meeting it had been agreed that the role of ESCWA as coordinator of United Nations activities in the region should be emphasized. ESCWA had been the first regional commission to undertake follow-up of the coordination process, through a meeting of the Regional Inter-agency Coordination Group held in April 1999.

35. An observation relating to the language of the note presented under agenda item 6 and of all ESCWA notes was made concerning the use of the Arabic word qutri, which lent itself to confusion with qatari, the adjective of nationality of Qatar,* and a solution to that problem was requested. Following a discussion between the various delegations, it was decided that the matter should be left to the Executive Secretary, but that during the current session the word watani (national) should be used in lieu of qutri.

* As short vowels are generally omitted in Arabic writing, the words qutri (“national”, or “country” used adjectively, as in “country programme”) and qatari (“of Qatar”) both appear in Arabic as qtri, only the context indicating the appropriate pronunciation, and hence the appropriate meaning.
4. Current issues of importance to the ESCWA region. Trade efficiency in ESCWA member countries: a comprehensive study (Agenda item 7)

36. The Executive Secretary recalled that during a past session the members of the Commission had requested the ESCWA secretariat to prepare for each session a study on a vital issue of concern to the region. The issue selected for the current year was trade efficiency in the ESCWA member countries.

37. A representative of the secretariat gave a presentation on that issue based on the relevant session document (E/ESCWA/20/6). She stated that the development of international trade, which had come to rank high among national priorities after the conclusion of the Uruguay Round talks and the establishment of the World Trade Organization (WTO), could not be achieved through the mere adoption of the principles of free trade, but also required the introduction of substantial improvements in the manner of concluding commercial transactions. To improve procedures, it was essential to identify obstacles and define possible solutions, which implied, among other things, the use of the latest technological developments, the application of the best practices through the simplification and integration of all trade procedures, and the sharing of benefits by all participants in a commercial transaction.

38. The representative of the secretariat mentioned that ESCWA had completed a comprehensive study in six parts on trade efficiency in the countries of the region, covering commercial practices, trade information, customs, banking and insurance, transport and communications. Upon the completion of the study, an informatics seminar on the subject had been held. The seminar had issued a plan of action whose recommendations included the adoption of the principle of trade efficiency as a goal in a clearly delineated foreign-trade policy; the creation of a national committee on trade efficiency in each country, with balanced representation of the State and the private sector; coordination among the national committees at the regional level; the rapid achievement of regional coordination in three main areas (customs, transit and transport); and the implementation of a policy aimed at increasing the participation of small and medium-sized enterprises in economic development.

39. During the ensuing discussion, one representative inquired about the role of ESCWA in preparing member States for negotiations with the WTO, mentioning that Yemen had been admitted to the WTO as an observer and needed an expert to assist it in negotiating. He voiced the desire of his Government to learn about the experiences of other Arab countries that had conducted negotiations with the WTO.

40. The Executive Secretary, commenting on the preceding statement, said that ESCWA had offered assistance in that area collectively, in cooperation with UNCTAD, in the form of studies, meetings, workshops and courses. He also mentioned the meeting for the Arab States shortly to be held by UNCTAD in Geneva. He informed the participants that ESCWA had created two new posts for regional advisers within the Commission, one on trade and the other on communications, so ESCWA would be better able to participate in the formulation of questions relating to electronic commerce (e-commerce). He said that all regional advisers were at the disposal of the member States whenever their services were required.

41. The representative of Qatar stated that his Government was willing to offer its expertise to any State preparing for negotiations with the WTO. He pointed out that the question of accession to the WTO Agreement was not merely economic but political as well, and that it was essential to show initiative, especially in the phase following accession. He said that technical assistance to States in that regard must be provided by ESCWA.

42. The representative of Kuwait, speaking of his country’s experience, said that Kuwait had been the first Arab country to join the WTO and placed Kuwait’s experience and expertise at the disposal of the member States. He expressed his Government’s support for ESCWA in that area. He referred to the growing urgency of dealing with the matter, stating that studies and the exchange of information were not enough, for the question required very careful scrutiny.

43. The representative of Jordan said that the manner of negotiating was an extremely delicate point; he referred specifically to the question of intellectual property, especially in the Arab region. He requested that any studies done on the subject by member States be distributed to the other ESCWA members.

44. The representative of Egypt, speaking of his country’s experience, said that the Government of Egypt would be pleased to assist other States in preparing for the negotiations. He pointed out that the Beirut Declaration touched on the question, the report of the Technical Committee referred to it, and Lebanon was to act as host to a meeting on the same subject, all of which showed that ESCWA was according proper attention to the issue.

45. The representative of Bahrain said that concern with the WTO was not confined to the accession phase, but also included the question of how to benefit from accession. He thanked the ESCWA secretariat for the assistance and training it had provided to the competent departments of the Ministry of Trade of his country to enable it to take advantage of its membership in the WTO.

46. The representative of UNCTAD mentioned that the Asian ministerial meeting was to be held in Beirut in August 1999 to prepare for the tenth session of UNCTAD and would provide an opportunity for member States to share their experience and expertise. He stressed the importance of preparing for the negotiations for accession to the WTO Agreement and commended the study done by ESCWA on trade efficiency in the ESCWA member countries, congratulating the secretariat on the excellence and comprehensiveness of the study.

47. The Chairman of the session indicated that there was a need to create an office at ESCWA to deal with the subject of trade efficiency and a need for symposia at which countries might share their experience and expertise in that area in order to benefit other countries.

5. Relocation of ESCWA to its permanent headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon
   (Agenda item 8)

48. The Executive Secretary presented the document relevant to the item (E/ESCWA/20/7/Rev.1). He thanked the Government of Lebanon for the facilities offered to the Commission, which enabled it to hold large meetings and even to host meetings other than its own.

6. Date and venue of the twenty-first session of the Commission
   (Agenda item 10)

49. One of the delegations proposed that the twenty-first session of ESCWA should be held at the Commission’s headquarters in Beirut in the latter part of May 2001.

50. A delegation proposed that the issue of importance addressed during the coming session should be “the year 2001 as the year of cultural dialogue”. The Executive Secretary said that ESCWA would consider the proposal as a recommendation regarding the choice of the issue for the session.

7. Celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission
   (Agenda item 9)

51. The Executive Secretary, in introducing this item, said that the occasion was not merely one of celebration, but also required the presentation of a critique of the past and a vision of the future, including an assessment of what had taken place both in the region and in the Commission. He proposed that Mr. Riad Tabbarah and Mr. Samir Makdisi should begin with a review of the principal economic and social developments that had taken place in the region, a detailed account of which could be found in the study entitled “The ESCWA region: twenty-five years, 1974 to 1999; political, economic and social developments” (E/ESCWA/1999/4). Messrs. Nabil Al-Khatib, Ismat Kittani and Edward Ghorra would then speak of the developments experienced by the Commission since its creation, which were elaborated upon in a study entitled “ESCWA (1974-1999): twenty-five years of service to the region’s development” (E/ESCWA/1999/2). Thereafter, a discussion of the presentations would be held, whereupon the session would conclude with the reading out of the Beirut Declaration.

52. Before the presentation of the studies, Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, expressed his pleasure at attending the session and at the great success with which it had been crowned. He referred to the regional hearings that had been held at ESCWA, which constituted the first of a series of such hearings to be held in all the regional commissions in preparation for the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations in the year 2000, in which heads of State and Government would participate. On behalf of the Secretary-General, he expressed his thanks to all those present for their valuable efforts.

53. The head of the delegation of Egypt expressed his country’s view regarding a statement contained in the second study mentioned above and relating to the historical background of the establishment of ESCWA to the effect, he said, that the creation of the State of Israel had rendered the borders mentioned in General Assembly resolution 181 of 29 November 1947 outdated owing to the passage of time. He expressed his belief that the existence of that expression required him to state for the record the position of his country regarding the report. United Nations resolutions, he said, did not lapse with the passage of time, nor were they voided by States’ rejection or acceptance of them, even if those States were the parties concerned.

54. He also disagreed with the statement in the study that it was not intellectual and cultural heritage that imparted to the region its special character.

55. The Executive Secretary replied that the observation was entirely correct and that he appreciated and endorsed it. He pointed out that the study had been done by researchers from outside ESCWA and contained the written disclaimer that the views contained in it were those of the authors and did not necessarily reflect the views of ESCWA.

56. A former Executive Secretary pointed out, with regard to the contents of the working papers, that nothing had been presented on 1991, during which he had been Executive Secretary of the Commission, implying that the Commission had done nothing of significance during that year. He felt that the Commission had failed to take into account the efforts he had made to reassemble ESCWA employees, at that time scattered throughout the world; the efforts made by the member States; and all the hardships that the staff members and their families had suffered, not to mention the conditions that had threatened the very existence of ESCWA.

57. Another former Executive Secretary praised the work undertaken by ESCWA and commended the efforts made by the current Executive Secretary to develop the role of the Commission. He said he would like the current session to be not merely an occasion for inquiring into the past, but also an occasion for pausing at the threshold of a new millennium. He expressed the view that the Beirut Declaration highlighted factors that lay outside the scope of ESCWA, stressing that he would like to find in it some reference to cooperation or to the intention of the member States to reaffirm their commitment to providing whatever the Commission required. The Commission was not merely a headquarters; it was essential for States to adopt the Commission in the full sense of the word and to adopt its orientations, for that, in his view, was of the greatest importance.

58. The Executive Secretary referred to all the meritorious efforts of the former Executive Secretaries, without which the Commission might not have survived at all.
59. Regarding the developments witnessed by the region, Mr. Riad Tabbahah, presenting a synopsis of the social portion of the first study mentioned above, said that as a result of the oil boom in the 1970s and 1980s, incomes in the countries of the region had become like those in the industrialized countries, though the social indicators for the former, especially in the fields of education and health, had remained at levels more characteristic of developing countries. ESCWA had made efforts to help restore the balance between the economic and social aspects. Achievements had subsequently been registered in the field of education, with illiteracy declining from 82 to 20 per cent and the number of universities increasing from 30 to 80. Despite those quantitative accomplishments, there were still some deficiencies in terms of quality, inasmuch as technical education was not accorded due importance owing to the emphasis placed on academic learning.

60. Mr. Samir Makdisi, presenting a synopsis of the economic portion of the same study, said that the major challenges faced by the region consisted in three external factors, namely, the Arab-Israeli conflict, the absence of a united negotiating front among the Arab countries, and the drop in petroleum prices. He mentioned four main developments: a decline in the share of oil revenue in gross domestic product, the growth of the export sector, an increase in the share of the industrial sector, and a decrease in the share of the government sector. He said that as a result of the considerable progress achieved in the field of education, specialized managerial staff had come into being in the various fields. Nevertheless, the still limited nature of technical capacities in the Arab countries hampered their participation in industrial development. He pointed out that most of the countries of the region had rid themselves of protective tariff restrictions. In spite of the progress made in privatization, the public sector was still the primary employer. Economic cooperation among the Arab countries had not yet materialized in the form of an Arab common market; under the existing conditions of globalization, it was imperative that the Arab countries join together in a single economic bloc in order to meet the challenges posed by other economic alliances.

61. Mr. Edward Ghorra, reviewing a survey of the diligent efforts made with a view to establishing ESCWA, stated that credit for the establishment of the Commission was due first of all to the Egyptian delegation to the General Assembly, whose endeavours had led to the adoption by the Assembly of its resolution 1941 (XVIII), dated 11 December 1963, in which it had recommended the creation of a technical assistance coordination unit in the United Nations Office in Beirut. He added that, as the representative of Lebanon to the Economic and Social Council, he had drawn the attention of the Council, in 1973, to the fact that the Arab countries of Western Asia were the only States Members of the United Nations that did not belong to a regional commission and that the United Nations Office in Beirut was not an intergovernmental body and did not have the power to present recommendations on behalf of the region’s Governments or to deal with matters relating to bilateral assistance, in the light of which he had proposed the creation of a commission for the region. On the basis of that proposal, the Economic and Social Council had adopted its resolution 1818 (LV) of 9 August 1973 calling for the establishment of the Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA).

8. Adoption of the report of the Commission on its twentieth session
(Agenda item 11)

62. The Commission adopted the draft report on its twentieth session on the understanding that the agreed amendments thereto would be made.
