I. ISSUES THAT REQUIRE ACTION BY THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

1. At its 8th meeting, the Commission adopted the following resolution to be brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council:

Resolution 52 (V). The permanent headquarters of the Economic Commission for Western Asia

2. At its 10th meeting, the Commission decided to bring the following decision to the attention of the Economic and Social Council:

The Economic Commission for Western Asia, at its fifth session, endorsed the draft Medium-Term Plan for 1980-1983 contained in documents E/ECWA/56 and E/ECWA/56/Add.1 after taking into consideration the observations made by certain member States.
II. ACCOUNT OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE FIFTH SESSION

Attendance and organization of work

3. The fifth session of the Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA) was held at Amman, Jordan, from 2 to 6 October 1978.

4. The session was opened by His Excellency Mr. Najmuddin Dajani, head of the delegation of Jordan, with a message from His Royal Highness Prince Hassan, the Crown Prince of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan and Regent of His Majesty the King. In his message, H.R.H. Prince Hassan welcomed the delegations to the fifth session of the Commission and pointed out the role which the Commission could play in furthering co-operation among the countries of the region, providing them with the necessary technical assistance and helping to define the region's position with regard to current international issues. He stressed the problem of the brain drain, its negative effects on the developing countries and the need to find ways and means of dealing with the problem. He also emphasized the urgent need to develop national capabilities for the absorption and adaptation of technology and the importance of establishing an Arab Centre for the Transfer and Development of Technology.

5. The Chairman of the fourth session, His Excellency Mr. Najmuddin Dajani, the Minister of Industry and Commerce of Jordan, then delivered an address welcoming the delegates to the fifth session of the Commission and commending its accomplishments, which were achieved under difficult circumstances resulting from the distressing events in Lebanon.

6. Mr. Dajani stated that although most of the countries of the region continued to achieve high growth rates and were able to overcome many of the bottle-necks that had previously impeded development, the region still had a long way to go before the development process would yield the desired results. In this respect, Mr. Dajani referred to the effective role that could be played by co-operation among the countries of the region and gave as an example the experiment under way between Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. He also pointed to the positive and effective contribution of the countries of the region to the development and stability of the world economy and to the strengthening of confidence between the developing and the developed countries. That contribution resulted from the responsible and intelligent policies pursued by the countries of the region in opening their markets to international trade, the assistance and loans offered to developing countries, which represented high proportions of their incomes, and their constructive participation in the deliberations and efforts aimed at the establishment of a new international economic order.

7. The Secretary of the Commission then read out a message from Mr. Kurt Waldheim, the Secretary-General of the United Nations, to the Commission at its fifth session, in which he stated that many of the topics on which the Commission was about to deliberate were of relevance not only to the ECWA region but to the international community as a whole. He pointed out that efforts to establish a new international economic order were aimed at providing a suitable framework for solving the problems confronting this community. He emphasized the importance of economic and technical co-operation among developing countries for collective self-reliance and noted with satisfaction the valuable contributions made by the oil-producing States members of ECMA in assisting the development efforts of nations within and outside the region. In particular, he welcomed the emphasis which those countries had placed on measures in favour of the least developed countries of the region and for assistance to Lebanon. He stressed that such a spirit of collaboration and support was the only basis on which lasting solutions to mutual problems could be found.

8. The Executive Secretary of the Commission opened his address with an expression of gratitude and appreciation to His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan and the Jordanian Government for the continuous support and hospitality which they had extended to the Commission. He referred to the current crises affecting the world economy and observed that the dialogue taking place between the developed and developing countries had not brought about structural changes consistent with the objectives of the developing countries. He emphasized, however, that in spite of existing difficulties and obstacles to the creation of an equitable international economic order, there was no substitute for dialogue in view of the extent and degree of interdependence among countries.

9. The Executive Secretary noted that the oil-producing countries in the ECMA region had made great efforts towards the creation of a more equitable world economic order by controlling their oil resources and utilizing their financial surpluses to contribute to the promotion of economic co-operation among developing countries, especially through financial aid to other developing countries. He pointed out that the financial surpluses of the oil-producing States had, in particular, enabled the ECMA region as a whole to make significant achievements in economic and social development. He said that the ECMA countries were, however, part of the third world and shared its problems.

10. The Executive Secretary reviewed the region's characteristics by dividing its countries into three groups: the oil-producing States, excluding Iraq, in which the petroleum sector dominated the economy; the non-oil-producing States, and Iraq, which had more diversified economies, and the least developed States, which had unexploited potential and which ranked among the major exporters of manpower. It was apparent, he said, that the best and most appropriate way to overcome those obstacles and to utilize available resources was to develop co-operation and integration within the region and with other parts of the Arab world. In this regard, he noted that the region had already made considerable progress and possessed a wealth of experience and numerous institutions engaged in integration efforts.

11. The Executive Secretary then briefly described the accomplishments of the Commission in the fields of long-term planning, the socio-economic survey of the region, advisory services in various socio-economic fields, technical assistance and training in the preparation and publication of national accounts and statistics, agricultural development, regional co-operation and integration, food security, co-ordination of industrial plans and programmes, telecommunications, water and mineral resources, transfer and development of technology, population activities, transport and communications, rural development, participation of youth in development, advancement of women, housing, manpower and training officials of the least developed countries in public finance and administration.
12. The Executive Secretary stated that the constant support of ECA member States had enabled the Commission to carry out a large part of its programmes despite difficult conditions. He expressed the hope that the support would be increased, especially by providing the Commission’s experts with the information and data needed for their studies and research.

Attendance at the session

13. The session was attended by representatives of the following member States: Bahrain, Democratic Yemen, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen. 23. In accordance with rule 11 of the provisional rules of procedure, officers of the Commission examined the credentials of representatives to the session and found them in order.

Agenda

24. In accordance with rule 9 of the provisional rules of procedure, the Commission agreed to reverse the order of items 4 and 5 of the revised provisional agenda as presented in document E/CN.25/55/Rev.1, and to discuss the problem of the brain drain under item 8 instead of item 6 (a) of the agenda.

25. The Commission also agreed to include under item 13 of the revised provisional agenda two subitems, one on the regional plan of action for the integration of women in development (proposed by the secretariat) and another on the participation of the Commission in the preparations for the United Nations Conference on Science and Technology for Development (proposed by the Jordanian delegation).

26. The Commission also considered a proposal to include in the agenda of the session an item on the establishment of a regional training centre for the use of computer technology for development and decided to defer this matter until a later session when the necessary documents for fruitful discussions would be available.

Consideration of applications of States Members of the United Nations not members of the Commission to participate in a consultative capacity in the fifth session of the Commission

28. The Commission adopted a proposal to invite the States Members of the United Nations listed in document E/ECWA/61/Rev.1, which were not members of the Commission, to participate in a consultative capacity in the fifth session. The delegation of Saudi Arabia expressed reservations regarding the list of States included in the above document. The Commission also adopted a proposal, made by the delegation of Saudi Arabia in document E/ECWA/61/Rev.2/Add.1, to invite the representative of the Islamic World League at Mecca to attend the Commission's sessions and to participate in their subsidiary meetings as a consultant observer.

Report on the activities of the Commission since the fourth session

29. The Executive Secretary introduced this item of the agenda and mentioned that the Commission's work during the period went beyond the activities carried out under the work programme, as reflected in document E/ECWA/57, to include achievements made in connexion with certain deferred projects in the 1976-1977 work programme together with activities undertaken at the request of the Governments of member States. In that connexion he drew attention to the Commission's reports on the ECMA Documentation Centre (E/ECMA/57/Add.1) and "The Brain drain: causes, consequences and remedies" (E/ECMA/57/Add.2). He indicated, however, that as the Commission had decided to include an item in the agenda of the present session on the migration of manpower from the countries of Western Asia to the developed countries, the problem of the brain drain would be examined under that item. He also drew attention to document E/ECMA/59 which summarized the action taken to implement the resolutions adopted by the Commission at previous sessions. In that connexion he referred to reports covering follow-up action on "Regional co-operation and co-ordination" (E/ECMA/59/Add.1), "The practices of transnational corporations in the oil industry in the region" (E/ECMA/59/Add.2), the "Economic survey of the countries of the Economic Commission for Western Asia" (E/ECMA/59/Add.3) and the "Study of the economic and social situation and potential of the Palestinian Arab people" (E/ECMA/59/Add.4). He also made reference to the modifications recommended by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) of the General Assembly in the resource requirements for the 1978-1979 Programme of work and priorities of the Commission as adopted at its fourth session (E/ECMA/60).

30. The Commission decided to examine separately each of the three subitems of the agenda as follows:

(a) Progress made in the implementation of the work programme

31. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic emphasized the need for a greater co-ordination of efforts within ECMA and between ECMA and other organizations in order to avoid duplication. He commended the work carried out so far on development trends and prospects in selected ECMA countries and expected subsequent work to provide the basis for establishing links between the economies of the region and the rest of the world. He emphasized the importance of statistics and urged member Governments to provide the necessary statistical information.

With respect to the proposed ECMA Documentation Centre, he noted that document E/ECMA/57/Add.1 had not fully examined all aspects of the subject and that the proposed activities, such as the establishment of a data bank and the preparation of statistics on manpower, were consistent with the work of the Statistics Unit of ECMA. He added that it was necessary to establish the organic links needed between the proposed operations of the Centre and the activities of ECMA divisions and units. Concerning the documentation for the session, the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic indicated that the documents should be prepared in Arabic and then translated into English. That was especially necessary when dealing with such complicated subjects as science and technology. He drew attention to the fact that the Commission's report contained no mention of the achievements made in the Syrian Arab Republic with regard to the project for the establishment of a computer centre and he emphasized the need to ascertain the feasibility of projects prior to their adoption.

32. In his observations on the implementation of the Commission's work programme, the representative of Iraq noted that the reporting period only covered activities carried out up to March 1978. He commended the Commission's work on long-term development trends and its active involvement in the preparation for an organization of the International Development Conference on the First Five-Year Development Plan of the Yemen Arab Republic and expressed the hope that similar arrangements would also be made to cover other countries. He supported the activities of the subregional training programme in public finance and administration (PROPFAD) and recommended that efforts should be made to ensure its continuation and that the scope of its services be expanded to cover other countries of the region. He requested that the workshop on "Budget-plan harmonization in countries of Western Asia" be financed from the ECWA budget.

33. The representative of Iraq stated that in the field of agriculture Iraq attached great importance to food security and agricultural integration, that studies on those topics should examine the situation in the region as a whole and that in the area of natural resources, special emphasis needed to be given to the development of water resources. He attached importance and urgency to the studies on energy and requested that closer co-operation with the Organization of Arab Petroleum Countries (OAPEC) be established.

34. With respect to the implementation of the work programme, the representative of Iraq indicated that it would be preferable to specify the time-table for the different stages of implementation and achievements. That was particularly relevant to projects that were likely to take a relatively longer time to complete. More attention should be devoted to the study of the economic and social impact of the operations of transnational corporations.

35. In the field of population, the representative of Iraq noted that no study had been undertaken on Arab manpower and indicated that the assistance of member States could be secured in conducting the study. He emphasized the need for more training in demography and suggested that training exercises similar to the one to be carried out in Amman, Jordan, be organized in other countries of the region.

36. With respect to the report on the establishment of the ECWA Documentation Centre, the representative of Iraq supported the proposal to convene an expert group meeting to discuss various aspects of the subject and indicated Iraq's readiness to assist.

37. The representative of Egypt stated that the study on long-term trends was an important effort but that it would be quite some time before the final output would be made available. He suggested that alternative methods and models should be sought where the statistical requisites were not too elaborate and difficult to obtain. He indicated that these and other studies should be discussed with the Governments and some of the regional organizations, such as the Council of Arab Economic Unity, before they were finalized in order to ensure co-ordination.

38. The representative of Jordan noted with satisfaction the trend towards field studies and studies on specific issues instead of general reports and studies. He commended the role of ECWA in the International Development Conference on the First Five-Year Development Plan of the Yemen Arab Republic as a good example of the field work being undertaken by ECWA. He emphasized the efforts which were jointly under way between Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic towards achieving agricultural integration and attached considerable importance to them, particularly as the region was a net importer of food. He indicated that such an endeavour was a good example of regional co-operation and integration.

39. Regarding the Documentation Centre, the representative of Jordan stated that more accurate information should be provided on the cost of its establishment and on practical steps to be taken to secure the required resources.
Follow-up action on the resolutions of the Commission

40. The representative of Iraq, in his remarks on the subitem, noted the delay in the implementation of some of the resolutions and requested an explanation. Regarding the programme of action in favour of the least developed countries of the region, he indicated that the programme should ensure adequate financial resources and that a resolution was needed on the subject. With respect to regional co-operation in the field of water resources, he reiterated the special attention given by Iraq to the importance of water resources, not only for agriculture but also for industrial and other purposes and urged the secretariat to intensify its efforts in this vital field. Regarding the reconstruction and development of Lebanon, he commended the services provided by the secretariat to assist the Lebanese Government in its post-war efforts and urged that such services be continued and the necessary financial resources secured in order to assist in carrying out the reconstruction programme.

41. On regional co-operation and co-ordination, the representative of Iraq drew the attention of the Commission to the Economic and Social Council resolution on strengthening the regional commissions which authorized them to act as executing agencies of the United Nations Development Programme, with the approval of the Governments concerned. He also requested the secretariat to identify regional projects for implementation by the Commission and to submit a report thereon to the next session of the Commission. He also requested the secretariat to delineate areas of importance to the Commission in connexion with the restructuring of the United Nations system. He noted that ECWA was not represented at the United Nations Conference on Technical Co-operation among Developing Countries held at Buenos Aires in September 1978.

42. On co-operation with the Economic Commission for Africa, he noted that not much co-ordination was recorded in spite of the similar nature of the problems confronting the countries of the two regions. Regarding the practices of transnational corporations in the oil industry in the region, he inquired about the interim nature of the report submitted in that connexion and pointed out its short-comings. Referring to national oil companies, he expressed reservations on the statement that the activities of national oil companies were rarely integrated. He added that the oil industry in Iraq was well integrated and that the same was true of a number of countries, such as the Syrian Arab Republic. Those countries had extended assistance in various areas of the oil sector to other countries, both within and outside the region. He further added that the scope of the study should be extended to deal also with such matters as the restrictive business and financial practices of the transnational corporations, their illegal practices and the extent of the return on their invested capital.

43. Concerning the economic survey of the ECWA countries, the representative of Iraq indicated that the resolution had not been fully implemented and urged that every effort be made to ensure its full implementation. He noted that the survey contained data only up to 1976 and had short-comings in statistics related to such areas as growth, mining and quarrying, oil and planning of financial resources. Regarding statistics on financial assistance and loans extended by oil-producing countries of the region to developing countries, he suggested that reference could have been made to the publications of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) instead of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD).
44. The representative of Iraq noted a marked deficiency in the implementation of the resolutions on the study of the economic and social situation and potential of the Palestinian Arab people and the census of the Palestinian Arab people. Despite the long period of time, no tangible progress had been recorded in that connexion. He urged all member countries to assist ECWA in the implementation of those studies and expressed Iraq's readiness to assist in that area.

45. The representative of Egypt emphasized the need to strengthen co-operation with the Economic Commission for Africa. Before adopting any resolution, he suggested the Commission should study the feasibility of its implementation and, in so doing, that it be realistic and practical. On the practices of transnational corporations in the oil industry, he said that the study should address itself to the redistribution of investments in the oil-producing Arab countries, particularly in the light of international efforts to secure alternative sources of energy.

46. The representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization commended the Commission for its efforts and work to assist the countries and peoples of the region, stating that those efforts needed to be intensified in order to achieve the desired goals. The two resolutions adopted by the Commission on the census of the Palestinian Arab people and the economic and social situation and potential of the Palestinian Arab people, he stated, remained until now only on paper and he urged that renewed efforts be made to implement them.

47. The representative of Jordan noted that the latest developments were not reflected in the follow-up report. He stressed that priority should be given to developing a framework for co-operation at the regional level and stated that it was time for ECWA to play a co-ordinating role at the regional level in conjunction with the League of Arab States and the Council of Arab Economic Unity, as there were a number of areas that required co-ordination. The Commission also needed to devise a formula to co-ordinate its work with the projects financed by the Arab funds.

48. The representative of Jordan, while commending the economic survey, stated that he would have liked to see also a descriptive and analytical presentation of the economic structures and development stages of the countries of the region over a span of time to allow comparison. In this, the development goals of member countries could have been enumerated in order to allow the evaluation of achievements and progress. He had some reservations on the economic and financial statistical indices used in the preparation of the document.

49. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic, commenting on the subitem, indicated that co-ordination was a difficult task although ECWA had made commendable efforts to achieve that objective. However, further efforts were still needed in that direction. He referred to two specific areas where co-ordination was necessary, namely statistical bulletins and training programmes. Regarding the practices of transnational corporations in the oil industry, he suggested that the study should also look into their policies concerning oil production and the development of alternative sources of energy.

50. On the economic survey, the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic noted the existence of wide differences when using current and fixed prices which he attributed to the different systems and concepts in use in the countries of the region and which needed to be unified; ECWA could fruitfully address itself to that technical issue. He also indicated that changes in national income indicators should also be taken into consideration when examining prices and inflationary pressures.

(c) Report on the 1978-1979 programme budget

51. Regarding the subitem, the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic stated that document (E/ECWA/60) did not give an adequate explanation concerning the resources spent so far and the allocation of expenses among projects. Specific amounts should be earmarked for each project in order to ensure its effective completion; otherwise, the resources might be scattered over a large number of projects. In reference to the financial difficulties which had prevented completion of the study on the economic and social situation and potential of the Palestinian Arab people, he emphasized the importance of the project and said that ECWA should find ways and means of completing the study.

52. The representative of Iraq supported the views of the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic with regard to the allocation of resources to specific projects such as the study on the Palestinian Arab people.

53. The representative of the Yemen Arab Republic proposed the inclusion of a new project in the programme budget aimed at the establishment of a centre to assist member States in conducting project feasibility studies. He recalled the activities of ECWA which had benefited Yemen, including assistance in holding the Yemen International Development Conference, assistance in the development of national accounts and other statistical information and training in financial management through the United Nations Regional Project for Public Finance and Administration (PROPFAD). Regarding the latter project, he referred to the comments of the representatives of the Syrian Arab Republic and Iraq that the training services should be extended to all member States and stressed that its operations be carried through 1979 and beyond.

54. Following the discussion on the item, the Executive Secretary replied to a number of questions and observations raised. He explained that the secretariat was bound by the work programme adopted by the Commission and could not change the nature of the studies therein nor add to them. This applied to the study of the brain drain phenomenon. Concerning the question of measures to ensure that resolutions adopted could be implemented, he stated that that was the responsibility of the Commission. He also affirmed that the difficulties which had so far impeded the implementation of the two resolutions on the Palestinian people did not originate in the secretariat.

55. In reply to the queries and observations concerning the activities of the Development Planning Division, the secretariat stated that studies would be prepared on the design of planning models and alternate models for the countries of the region and that those studies would specify the grounds upon which they were based. Those studies would respond to the directives of the work programme and the resolutions of the General Assembly concerning the development strategy for the third decade. The projections and forecasts to be prepared would remain simple and they would be derived from the actual situation and development plans of the member countries. Concerning the programme on transnational corporations, the secretariat explained that, following the period covered by the progress report on the implementation of the work programme, information-gathering covered all the member States and not just Lebanon. The study on transnational corporations was in hand and would take into consideration the studies conducted thereon by United Nations organizations, including the ILO. Within the limits of the relevant information and data available, the study would examine the conformity of the practices of the transnational corporations with the laws and regulations of the countries of the region and would endeavour to include a number of financial analyses and comparisons. In the area of international trade and development, the secretariat pointed out that contacts had been established for the purpose of co-ordination and co-operation with the relevant Arab organizations, particularly the Council of Arab Economic Unity (CAEU) and the League of Arab States. Concerning the economic survey of the countries of Western Asia, the secretariat had relied on statistics contained in the documents that member States and international organizations had made available to it. The secretariat would welcome any written corrections received from member countries. The observation in the last chapter of the survey that the greatest challenge facing the countries of the region, namely the maximization of industrialization, was a subject that was open to discussion, even though the intention of the study was to concentrate on a problem derived from the actual circumstances of the majority of the member countries without detracting from the importance of other sectors.

56. Regarding the activities of the Statistics Unit, the secretariat pointed out that the work of the unit was not limited to national accounts but included two types of statistics. The first was current statistics, which covered various statistical areas in the countries of the region and which were published in the Annual Statistical Abstract. The other type consisted of specialized statistical surveys. In addition to national accounts, which had received major attention, those specialized surveys included other areas such as prices, the cost of living and statistical organization. As for the dispersion of statistical activity among various divisions and the fact that it was not all concentrated in the Statistics Unit, the explanation was that the unit was still new. It was hoped that the unit would gradually replace the different divisions in the collection of statistics and become the principal source for all published statistics in ECUA. The Statistics Unit would endeavour to avoid duplication of effort in its statistical publications and activities.

57. With respect to the Water Conference, the secretariat indicated that at the preparatory regional meeting held at Baghdad in December 1976, a resolution was adopted which called for the establishment of a Regional Council for Water Resources which was later reflected in the United Nations General Assembly resolution on the subject. At the fourth session of the Commission the secretariat was requested to contact member States to ascertain whether they wanted to join such a Council. The contacts made had brought only few responses. Pursuant to the General Assembly resolution on Water Resources, it was decided to hold a regional preparatory meeting before the end of the year in order to follow up the recommendations of the United Nations Water Conference and to discuss the question of the proposed Water Resources Council. Contacts had been established with the Government of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia with a view to the hosting of this meeting by the Kingdom and the secretariat was awaiting an official reply.

58. Regarding the proposal to establish a computer centre in the Syrian Arab Republic, the secretariat indicated that, following an examination of the issue, it had been decided that ECWA would prepare a study on technology and computers and that the proposed project should be postponed until the study was completed. Concerning energy, the first draft of the study on energy forecasts in the region had been completed. It was in the process of being finalized and would be sent to member States for their views. A second study had been initiated on energy institutions in the region and was expected to be completed in early 1979. Preparatory work was also under way for a conference on energy to be held in 1979. In all of these the secretariat had maintained close contact with OAPPC.

59. On the question of the need for regional studies on food security and co-operation and integration in agriculture, the secretariat indicated that there were two fundamental considerations: first, that the significance of such studies extended beyond the national or regional level to apply to the Arab world as a whole; second, that there were some regional organizations such as the Council of Arab Economic Unity, the Arab Organization for Agricultural Development and international organizations such as FAO, which were involved in dealing with those issues throughout the Arab world.

60. Regarding the need for training programmes in the field of population and demography, the secretariat indicated that there were regional United Nations demographic centres in Cairo and Budapest which provided training programmes; the secretariat had assisted member States and individuals to benefit from those programmes, select universities and obtain scholarships. In carrying out activities under the population programme, efforts had been made to strike a balance between the compilation and dissemination of information, on the one hand and analysis, on the other, with priority being given to demographic analysis. Concerning the census of the Palestinian Arab people, the secretariat indicated that it had done all it was required to do in that respect. The resolution, in fact, had called for action which was not provided for in the programme budget. A project document for a plan of action had been prepared along with the cost estimates.

The financial status of the Commission's programmes and the strengthening of the Voluntary Fund

61. The Deputy Executive Secretary introduced this item of the agenda which was in response to ECWA resolution 45 (IV) requesting the Executive Secretary to submit a financial report for the period between the sessions. It also called for the submission by the Executive Secretary of a financial statement on the Voluntary Fund for the approval of the Commission at each session. Document E/ECWA/63 was submitted, in accordance with those provisions, on the financial status of Commission programmes, the sources of such financing and the proposals of the Executive Secretary regarding the strengthening of the financial resources of the Commission.

62. The Commission's attention was drawn to the difficulty of obtaining additional resources from the regular budget of the United Nations, in view of the fact that the General Assembly had reduced the proposed budget of the Commission for the biennium 1978-1979 by more than a quarter of a million dollars, thus increasing the Commission's difficulties in the achievement of its work programme. Concerning the provision of financial resources for the Voluntary Fund, he stated that the results of the Executive Secretary's contacts with member States had not been very productive financially. However, they were encouraging from the moral point of view since some of the member States had expressed readiness to contribute symbolic amounts to the Fund as a gesture of their concern for the Commission's work programmes. The Executive Secretary referred to the interest of a number of States Members of the United Nations from outside the region - the Netherlands in particular - and their readiness, in principle, to participate in the work programmes of the Commission. He concluded by suggesting that the Commission might see fit to change the name of the Voluntary Fund in order to avoid the ambiguity that might occasionally arise concerning the nature of the activities of the Fund as a result of such a designation. The purpose of establishing the Voluntary Fund was to obtain additional financial resources from outside the budget of the United Nations in order to carry out specific activities of the Commission and not to compete with existing "funds".

63. The representative of Egypt inquired whether the resources of the Voluntary Fund came from regular annual contributions or from ad hoc contributions, pointing out that this had a bearing on the number of posts financed from the Fund.

64. The representative of Iraq suggested that the secretariat might in the future wish to present the budget to a sub-committee of the member States before submitting it to the General Assembly of the United Nations. He also indicated that some of the activities financed from the Voluntary Fund should have been financed from the regular budget of the United Nations.

65. The representative of Kuwait stated that his country's delegation had already asked the secretariat to prepare a statement describing the composition of the secretariat and the posts filled on its manning table. The purpose was to promote the utilization of available expertise and to estimate the needs of the region in terms of the different specialized disciplines.

66. The representative of Jordan endorsed the idea of changing the name of the Voluntary Fund so as to avoid the confusion that might arise from its present name and noted that his Government was in the process of studying the possibility of contributing to the Fund.

67. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic also stated that his Government intended to contribute to the Voluntary Fund.

68. A number of delegates wanted to know what additional posts requested by the Commission were approved and what posts were rejected so as to follow up the matter in the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Most of the delegations also agreed to change the name of the Voluntary Fund and called upon the secretariat to submit proposals on the subject.

69. Following the deliberation of the Commission on this agenda item, the secretariat presented a number of clarifications and responses to some of the queries and observations raised during the discussion. Regarding the financing of some projects from the Voluntary Fund instead of from the regular budget, the secretariat replies that the regular budget could not even cover all the activities included in the work programme of the Commission and that, therefore, recourse to the Voluntary Fund was necessary in order to finance activities not included on the Commission's work programme but requested by countries of the region. As for the proposal to present the budget to a sub-committee of member States prior to its submission to the General Assembly of the United Nations, it was pointed out that the rules and regulations of the United Nations did not permit that procedure. In answer to the question on the composition of the Commission's secretariat and its personnel, attention was drawn to the reports issued by the Fifth Committee following discussion of the personnel issues and it was stated that those reports contained detailed information on the Secretariat of the United Nations, including ECWA. The secretariat further noted that the information was very accurate and detailed and that it was classified according to the subjects that concerned the member States - including geographic distribution and the grade, level and age of all staff members. In order to avoid any confusion concerning the activities of the Voluntary Fund, the secretariat proposed changing the name to the "Financial Contributions Account." The Commission approved the proposal. The representative of Saudi Arabia subsequently announced that his country would be contributing the amount of $US 300,000 to that account.

Migration of manpower from the countries of Western Asia to the developed countries

70. The Commission discussed this item of the agenda on the basis of the study contained in document E/ECWA/57/Add.2.

71. The representative of Jordan indicated his country's special concern with the issue of the migration of manpower and suggested the implementation, at the regional level, of the proposal submitted by H.R.H. Prince Hassan to the International Labour Organisation in June 1977 regarding the establishment of an international voluntary fund to compensate for the migration of manpower, to which countries benefiting from the migration would contribute and invest their resources in projects of benefit to the labour-exporting countries. He mentioned that the study was included in the Commission's work programme and appeared as an ECWA document although the Commission was not responsible for its content since it was prepared by a consultant from outside the secretariat. In accordance with the request of the Arab Fund for Economic and Social Development, which was one of the contributors to the Commission's Financial Contributions Account, he continued the scope of the study had been enlarged to include the movement of highly qualified personnel among the countries of Western Asia. He emphasized that the criteria used in the study to measure the brain drain within the Arab States were different from those used to measure the brain drain to other parts of the world and that a radical change had taken place in the character of labour migrations among the Arab States with regard to the significance of their socio-economic consequences both in the labour-exporting and the labour-importing countries.

72. The representative of Iraq made a number of observations concerning the statistical basis of the study, the causes of the brain drain and the policies pursued to reduce the seriousness of this phenomenon. He referred to the possibility of improving the statistical data used in the study and the need for a more thorough analysis of the causes, especially those of a psychological and social nature, which induce skilled Arab manpower to migrate. He added that the study did contain, however, a number of basic priorities that could be adopted and hoped that the study of the migration of manpower within the Arab States would be continued. With regard to the establishment of a regional institution to compensate for the migration of labour, he pointed out the importance of taking into account the endeavours of the Arab Labour Organization in that respect.

73. The representative of the Yemen Arab Republic stressed that the problem was not confined to the migration of technical personnel but also included skilled and unskilled labour. He mentioned that the implementation of development projects in Yemen, which was a basic exporter of unskilled labour, had been adversely affected by the migration of Yemeni workers; consequently, it became necessary, in certain cases, to recruit labour from outside the country.

74. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic noted that, in addition to the issue of the brain drain to other parts of the world, the study also dealt with the brain drain within the region and that it was not confined to highly qualified personnel but also included other kinds of labour. He pointed out that the study did not deal with the reverse trends in the brain drain and stressed the need to study future trends in the field in view of their important consequences for the development process in member States. He proposed that a field survey be conducted to assess the Arab States' needs for various specialists on the basis of their development plans and that a further field study be conducted to determine the type of specialists available and the extent to which they met development requirements in the Arab States, which would enable studies to be prepared at the regional level, or for the Arab States as a whole, with the aim of establishing a balance between needs and potential. He was in favour of a continuation of the study on the brain drain provided that this was undertaken within two independent contexts: the brain drain from the countries of Western Asia to other parts of the world and the migration of labour among the countries of Western Asia, and that a study also be made of the phenomenon of the reverse trend in the brain drain and the migration of labour.

75. The representative of the United Arab Emirates supported the proposal of the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic that the study should be undertaken within two separate contexts and stressed the importance of studying the brain drain and migration of labour within the region in all its economic, social and political aspects.

76. The representative of Egypt stressed the significance of the psychological and social factors in the brain drain and the need to distinguish between temporary and permanent migration. He added that, in the event of the approval of the study by the Commission, emphasis should be placed on an analysis of the policies adopted by countries of the region to curb the brain drain.

77. In connexion with the brain drain and the migration of labour to the Gulf States, the representative of Kuwait stated that the movement had taken place either as a result of bilateral agreements, Arab national motives or personal reasons, and she wondered whether the study would be adopted by the Commission and issued in its name, in which case there would be ample opportunity to improve it by the incorporation of new information to make it more useful and comprehensive. She added that the topic of the study was a complex one with political, economic and social ramifications. She proposed that the member States should approach the study from the standpoints most appropriate to their own circumstances and that, if it was intended to widen the scope of the study, this should be done in accordance with clear and well defined principles and aims.

78. The representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization confirmed the need for a clear definition of objectives should the study be continued or its scope widened. He pointed out that the division dealing with the Palestinian brain drain in the study had not utilized all the available information. He also referred to the enforced migration of Palestinian workers from the occupied territories as a result of the practices of the occupying authorities and their exploitation of the workers.

79. The discussion showed that opinion was unanimous on the value of the study, the importance of the subject and its close connexion with socio-economic development in the region. There was general agreement regarding the need to separate the problem of the brain drain to the developed countries from the question of the migration of labour of various categories among the countries of the region since the first issue represented a definite loss to the region while the second issue was a fundamental factor in regional co-operation and contributed to the development of the region as a whole. There was also partial unanimity on the need to supplement the study in order to cover aspects which might have been overlooked or given insufficient attention, in particular the updating of the statistical data, the incorporation of future trends in the brain drain and fuller treatment of the issue of the Palestinian brain drain to other parts of the world.

80. The Executive Secretary clarified certain points raised during the discussion. He stated that the study formed part of the Commission's work programme and that certain Arab funds had expressed a desire for its scope to be widened to cover all the Arab States; this could be achieved by co-operating with the Economic Commission for Africa in regard to the brain drain from the Arab countries located in the African continent. He noted that the study remained the responsibility of the consultant who prepared it, although it could become an ECUA study after account was taken of the comments made during the discussion; it would require the allocation of the necessary funds and such allocation would have to be discussed during the examination of the Commission's future budget. He added that the study had another objective, namely the compilation of a roster giving the number and type of highly qualified Arab personnel residing abroad, and that, in this respect, the secretariat had made numerous endeavours that had not yet borne fruit.

The Arab Regional Centre for the Transfer and Development of Technology

81. The secretariat presented the course of action it had followed in implementing the Commission's resolution 51 (IV) which called for the examination of the possibility of establishing a regional centre for the transfer and development of technology. The secretariat also briefly described the draft feasibility study it had prepared and the procedure it had followed in its preparation (E/ECWA/66, E/ECWA/67 and E/ECWA/68).

82. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic endorsed the idea of establishing the proposed Centre in view of the many benefits that all the Arab countries stood to derive from it. He proposed that the Centre adopt a decentralized form of organization, i.e., that it be composed of a number of specialized regional centres situated in different Arab countries and linked to the Centre's general administration, which would co-ordinate their activities vis-à-vis each other and vis-à-vis their respective national, regional and international counterparts. He also stressed that while the Syrian delegation proposed this concept, it did not consider it a substitute for the Commission's study, but rather a supplementary measure that could be implemented following the establishment of the Regional Centre.

83. The representative of Jordan supported the observations of the representative of the Syrian Arab Republic and emphasized the importance of making a decision that would accelerate the establishment of the proposed Centre in the light of the meetings that were held at Amman and at Cairo for this purpose.

84. The representative of Kuwait asked if the resolutions of past meetings were to be considered the established base for accepting the idea of the Centre and inquired as to the reason for convening a meeting of ministers concerned with science and technology. She added that it might be preferable to refer the study and the whole subject of establishing the Centre to the secretariat of the League of Arab States for a decision. She also declared that the delegation of Kuwait was not authorized to make a decision on establishing the Centre, given the importance of the subject and the financial commitment involved in its establishment.

85. The representatives of Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia stated that they had no authority from their Governments to take a decision regarding the establishment of the Centre. The delegation of Saudi Arabia affirmed its support, in principle only, for the establishment of the Centre, requested a modification of the feasibility study and also expressed interest in the subject of co-operation between the regional Centre and the various national centres.

86. The representative of Egypt pointed to the objectivity and comprehensiveness of the study and asserted that the recommendations and resolutions that might be adopted on the establishment of the Centre ought to be founded on a realistic view of the feasibility of their implementation, including securing the necessary financing and the guarantee of continuity.

87. The representative of Iraq made a number of observations. He stated that, as presented in the feasibility study, the Centre was to rely fundamentally on the principle of commercial profit in its operations as well as in its financing. What was needed, however, was the establishment of a Centre to assist the Arab countries with their requirements in the field of the transfer and adaptation of technology, unencumbered by financial implications which might over-burden those countries that possessed limited resources. He also indicated that the all-inclusive nature of the Centre's proposed activities would turn it into a planning and development centre and an educational and training institution with activities resembling those of other Arab regional centres and organizations. He added that it was necessary for the activities of the Centre to be concentrated on the transfer and adaptation of technology, working on the principle of close co-ordination and co-operation with Arab regional organizations and bodies. The representative of Iraq also stated that the proposed Centre should support the countries of the region in strengthening and developing their national organizations, and should endeavour to integrate its activities with theirs. He pointed out that the study had neglected the scientific research institutions and academies of the countries of the region and the need to establish ways and means of co-operation with them. He noted, moreover, that the feasibility study did not reveal the proportion of short-term projects as they appeared in the draft feasibility study submitted to the Second Interagency Meeting, which met at Beirut from 27 February to 1 March 1978, and that the study had overlooked the area of research and development which had been considered at that meeting.

88. The representative of Iraq also expressed the opinion that the Centre's administration should be limited to its member Arab countries and that the Arab funds and organizations should be given a secondary role therein. As for the privileges proposed for the Centre and for its staff, these should not exceed those granted to international and Arab regional organizations. While the representative of Iraq admitted that the establishment of the Arab Regional Centre for the Transfer and Development of Technology was essential, he saw, at the same time, a need to redraft the study in the light of the opinions, guidelines and reservations expressed by the member countries of the Commission, including the reservations on the proposed sample study topics, particularly the one related to the Arab defense industry which had been discussed at previous meetings.
90. After discussion of this item, the secretariat explained that the plan of action being followed, including the meetings held to examine the possibility of establishing the Centre, conformed to the spirit of the resolution adopted by the Commission at its fourth session, which called for the closest possible association of all interested United Nations and Arab regional organizations and Governments in the preparation of the study. The secretariat also asserted that, from the start, it wanted the Commission to have the final authority on deciding whether the proposed Centre would be established. Thus, all the resolutions on the Centre were adopted in the form of recommendations, to be placed before the present session. Furthermore, in reply to a question on certain financial and operational aspects of implementing the Centre project (if its establishment should be decided), the secretariat stated that part of its plan of action was to submit the relevant recommendations proposed at the present session to a meeting attended by representatives of the approving Governments and of the Arab funds and organizations. That meeting would decide on the Centre's structure, its sources of financing and other measures needed for launching it. The secretariat of the Commission also noted that, in accordance with contacts made with the secretariat of the League of Arab States, the subject of the Centre's financing would be submitted to the League's Economic and Social Council following completion of the final draft of the study.

91. The secretariat also pointed out that the privileges proposed for the Centre and its staff were not intended to exceed the privileges granted by the Arab States to Arab and international organizations operating on their territory. In reference to the objection made by the representative of the Abu Dhabi Fund regarding the report of the Joint Meeting of Representatives of Arab Governments and Arab Regional Organizations on the Centre, the secretariat explained that it was not possible to correct the record since it had been adopted with no objections. The secretariat promised, however, to take the position of the representative of the Fund into consideration when preparing the revised version of the feasibility study.

92. The secretariat then stated that one of the activities of the Centre described in the study was that of assisting in the design and development of specialized research and development centres in the Arab countries but that the decision concerning the links between the proposed Regional Centre and those national centres would be left to the Regional Centre's General Assembly.

93. Commenting on the observation about the commercial features of the Centre, the secretariat explained that the intention was that the payments made in return for Centre services would cover the actual costs of such services and not achieve commercial profits. That was a common practice at a number of regional organizations, such as the Industrial Development Centre for Arab Studies (IDCAS). The costs of services rendered to countries with limited financial resources, however, could be covered by Arab development funds.
94. The secretariat, mentioning the sample topics for study by the Centre given in the feasibility study, pointed out that these had been listed as examples only and that the Centre was under no obligation to implement them all at once. The details would be left to the Centre's General Assembly and to its Governing Board.

95. The secretariat stated that the proposed activities of the Centre included the need for co-operation with Arab centres at the national and regional levels, and gave priority to the role of the Centre as co-ordinator and complementary partner of the institutions working in the fields of research and development, planning and the adaptation and development of technology. The secretariat considered that the participation of Arab development funds in the constituent assembly of the Centre was imperative because of the close links between those funds and development programmes. This would not diminish the role of the Arab Governments but would give them the necessary back-up as long as the funds remained subject to their control.

96. In connexion with the observation concerning the proportion of short-term projects, which accounted for 86 per cent of the activities of the proposed Centre, the secretariat referred to table 3 of the study where each activity was classified according to the level of effort and manpower required, together with the priority of such efforts in the work programme. The secretariat confirmed, however, that those concepts were liable to modification by the Centre's General Assembly which had been assigned the task of determining the priorities and the importance of each activity in due course.

97. The secretariat explained that most of the officials interviewed by the two missions visiting the member States had stressed that research and development should not be included among the Centre's activities and that that area should be left to Arab specialized centres. Nevertheless, the study indicated the possibility of reviewing the matter together with that of other unspecified activities after three years from the date of the Centre's establishment, in the light of current developments. With regard to the listing of the defence industry with other possible study topics, the secretariat explained that there was a difference of opinion among those who had discussed the feasibility study regarding the exclusion or inclusion of this topic, especially in the light of information stating that this industry was still run by foreigners in the Arab world. The secretariat nevertheless affirmed that the sample topics were no more than lists of examples to assist the Centre's General Assembly in selecting studies which, in its opinion, were essential and significant.

Adoption of the 1980-1983 medium-term plan

98. The Executive Secretary introduced the agenda item and explained that the plan (document E/ECWA/56) represented the policy framework for the Commission's 1980-1983 programmes and, after its adoption by the General Assembly of the United Nations, would constitute the basis for the preparation of the 1980-1981 programme budget. He stated that the secretariat regarded the concentration of the Commission's resources on a lesser number of subprogrammes than in previous plans as an important step towards the achievement of greater effectiveness. He added, however, that the Plan did not meet the requirements of General Assembly resolution 32/197 in connexion with the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system, nor did it reflect the international development strategy being prepared for the 1980s. The secretariat realized, therefore, the importance of maintaining a sufficient degree of flexibility in the Plan to take account of such issues when preparing the 1980-1981 programme budget. He drew attention to the proposals contained in document E/ECWA/56/Add.1 regarding the inclusion of a programme for cartographic development and co-operation in the field among the member States owing to the importance of the issue from the point of view of the region and the secretariat.

99. The representative of Iraq made a number of observations on the content of the plan. In connexion with economic co-operation and integration, he noted that greater emphasis was placed on industry than on other sectors such as agriculture and regional trade. He pointed out the close relationship between rural development and prevailing agricultural systems and drew attention to the fact that the diversity of those systems among member States would impede the implementation of the plan. He went on to say that, with regard to food security, what was required was the formulation of a plan, in conjunction with the member States, to define priorities, rather than the undertaking of studies on the existing situation and that the formulation of a plan for the transfer of technology to the countries of the region had been made subject to the establishment of the Arab Regional Centre for the Transfer and Development of Technology and priority had been accorded in the plan to the establishment of that Centre. He inquired as to why the statistical plan concentrated on only two fields, namely national accounts and prices, and neglected the analysis of statistical data. He added that the plan made no reference to the methods that would be adopted to improve the capabilities of member States in the field of statistics since training alone was insufficient. With regard to human settlement, he thought that it would be more appropriate to concentrate on specific projects in conjunction with existing organizations in the member States rather than on the collection of data. In the field of housing also, more emphasis was placed on demographic data collection than on manpower. He pointed out that in the field of public finance and administration the plan had overlooked administrative development which was an important factor in view of the acute shortage of qualified personnel from which the region was suffering in that area. The representative of Iraq concluded by stating that the document under discussion did not constitute a plan so much as a work programme which the Commission would endeavour to carry out.

100. The representative of Kuwait hoped that the reduction of the number of subprogrammes in the present plan would lead to better results and that the plan would concentrate its attention on useful national or joint projects and also on regional integration in contrast to previous plans which had put greater emphasis on economic analyses and studies and data collection. She welcomed the concern shown in the plan for the various aspects of economic integration and called upon the Commission to suggest ways of implementing the recommendations and proposals made at seminars and incorporated in the studies on food security in the region. She hoped that there would be co-ordination between the Commission and the provisional secretariat of the Regional Organization for the Protection of the Marine Environment that would be based in Kuwait.

101. The representative of Jordan drew attention to the need for flexible interpretation of the plan to allow new developments to be assimilated. He indicated the importance of the proposed inclusion in the plan of a programme for development and co-operation in the field of cartography in the ECWA region where existing institutions were still suffering from an acute shortage of specialists in this important field.
102. The secretariat replied to the observations and queries raised during the discussion and explained that the plan constituted a general framework for the orientation of the Commission's activities during a specific period rather than a plan in the generally accepted sense of the term and that it concentrated on a number of fundamental issues. With regard to regional co-operation, the plan was not solely concerned with industry but also covered other fields such as agriculture and the development of trade relations among the countries of the region. In connexion with food security, it was essential that the formulation of any regional or country plan be preceded by the necessary studies. The concern with the issue of the transfer of technology was apparent from the activities due to be undertaken within the period of the plan. In the case of statistics, the activities in the plan were distributed between data collection, the preparation of specialized studies, statistical organization and training. The secretariat hoped that it would be able to increase its effectiveness in the field of human settlement by the provision of guidance through a regional adviser to be appointed in due course. With regard to the emphasis placed on financial issues in the development finance and administration programme, this was due to the shortage of funds allocated to the programme. The secretariat would endeavour, however, to strike a balance between the two parts of the programme.

Establishment of subsidiary bodies of the Commission

103. In introducing agenda item 11, the Executive Secretary referred to document E/ECWA/58 on the subject and stated that the practice of resorting to subsidiary bodies had been used in varying degree in other regional commissions which had been in existence for a long time. He pointed out that the secretariat was of the opinion that the activities of the Commission would soon reach a momentum which would require the establishment of such bodies. However, instead of creating such bodies in an ad hoc manner, it was necessary to review, in a comprehensive way, the need for setting up subsidiary bodies including their type and number, terms of reference, technical fields to be covered, their financial implications and other aspects. He recommended that a detailed study be undertaken, in consultation with member Governments and regional and international organizations, to be presented to the next session of the Commission. He indicated that since no provision had been made for such activity in the Commission's 1978-1979 Programme Budget, the secretariat envisaged the use of the ECWA Financial Contributions Account.

104. In the discussion which followed on the item, the representative of Iraq supported the views of the Executive Secretary and suggested that the possibility of establishing subsidiary bodies in specific fields, particularly to co-ordinate work with UNCTAD, be also examined with a view to enabling the Commission, inter alia, to hold preparatory meetings in connexion with UNCTAD conferences.

105. The representative of the Syrian Arab Republic stated that the creation of subsidiary bodies be connected with the process of integrating the Commission's work from the point of view of form and content and that efforts should be made to strengthen the divisions of the secretariat prior to the establishment of subsidiary bodies.

106. The representative of Jordan supported the creation of subsidiary bodies in certain fields after the necessary study had been undertaken. He believed that such bodies would enhance the effectiveness of the work of the Commission since they would include specialists in particular fields and could thus help to bridge certain information gaps. He requested that the study be carried out in close collaboration with member Governments.

107. The representative of Egypt suggested that the study should also look into alternative forms of subsidiary bodies, such as consultative committees, ad hoc and standing committees, working groups and the like.

108. The representative of Kuwait believed that such bodies should be established according to specific needs. She questioned the reason behind carrying out the proposed study and added that the Commission had adopted a resolution to establish a follow-up committee which had still not been set up. She stated that ECWA was still young and that the question of committees should be deferred until the Commission was able to service them.

109. The representative of Saudi Arabia supported the views of Kuwait and inquired whether such committees would be temporary or permanent in nature. He was concerned about the possibility of duplication when establishing such bodies in the region and urged caution in that regard.

110. The representative of Jordan drew attention to the fact that an increasing number of studies were being prepared at ECWA in various fields and that the annual sessions of the Commission were too short to enable an in-depth review of these. He thought that the studies and reports should be submitted to technical committees for their views. He added that the proposed study might come up with the conclusion that no subsidiary bodies were needed for the time being. It was very important, however, that the study be prepared so that the Commission might know what it can establish and what it cannot.

111. The Executive Secretary stated that, in the light of all the reasons mentioned by the representatives of member countries, it was necessary to undertake the study and send it to the Governments of member countries for their views prior to the sixth session. With respect to the proposal of the representative of Iraq, he mentioned that numerous negotiations were under way for joint programming with UNCTAD and that the secretariat had communicated with member countries on various issues such as the establishment of the Common Fund on which no more than a few replies had been received. He urged the delegates of member countries to expedite their replies so that work could begin in co-ordination with the CAEU and other regional bodies concerned.

Interim reports on the Commission's headquarters

112. The Executive Secretary introduced the item and pointed out that the issue of the Commission's permanent headquarters had been under discussion since the establishment of ECWA. He drew the Commission's attention to the opinion of the United Nations legal counsel in New York, as set forth in paragraph 14 of document E/ECWA/64, to the effect that the organization's move from the country of its temporary headquarters to the country of its permanent headquarters was a matter which only the members of the Commission could decide. He stated that the secretariat had prepared a detailed statement on the financial implications of the resolution to move and that document E/ECWA/64/Add.1 contained a special section showing the financial implications in the event of the adoption by the present session of a resolution to transfer the headquarters to Baghdad in September 1979.

113. The representative of Iraq indicated that there were two separate issues before the Commission: the permanent headquarters at Baghdad and the temporary headquarters at Beirut. He affirmed that the Government of Iraq was giving serious attention to the matter of the permanent headquarters and had allocated the necessary funds for the purpose in the five-year plan. He then submitted a brief report on the progress of work on the project in which he highlighted its technical and engineering aspects.

114. The representative of Iraq raised a number of points regarding the relocation of the Commission's headquarters to Baghdad and mentioned that the choice of Baghdad as the permanent headquarters of the Commission was not a matter for discussion since it had been decided in resolution 2045 (LXI) adopted by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. He added that the five-year period for the location of the temporary headquarters at Beirut would end on 9 September 1979 as stipulated in the Commission's resolution 6 (S-1). He stated that the Government of Iraq had requested the Executive Secretary on 17 June 1976 to transfer the Commission to its permanent headquarters at Baghdad with effect from September 1979 and had notified the Secretary-General of the United Nations of that request. The Executive Secretary was further requested in a subsequent letter to inform the Government of all the requirements needed to effect the transfer. He expressed his regret that the Iraqi Government had not yet received any of the information requested. He added that the final designs for the permanent headquarters had been prepared after protracted consultations with the technical departments of the United Nations and that agreement in principle had been reached with the Iraqi Contracting Company, which is a government institution, to begin work on the project in early 1979. He indicated that the period which had elapsed since the approval by the Economic and Social Council on 27 October 1976 of making Baghdad the permanent headquarters had not given Iraq sufficient time to complete the construction and that there were numerous precedents in the United Nations where relocation to temporary offices at permanent headquarters had taken place prior to the move to the permanent offices. He stated that the Iraqi Government had allocated two new buildings at no cost to the United Nations, that the Executive Secretary and the Chief, Buildings and Management Service, from the Office of General Services at United Nations Headquarters had inspected the buildings and that the Chief, Buildings Management Service, could acquaint the Commission with his impressions as to whether the buildings permitted the Commission to carry out its major functions as described in paragraph 3 of resolution 6 (S-1). He urged the members of the Commission to accept the Iraqi request since it was in keeping with the resolutions adopted by the Commission and the United Nations and also with the opinion of the United Nations legal counsel as set forth on page 4 of document E/ECWA/64. He drew attention to the fact that document E/ECWA/64/Add.1, which the secretariat had submitted on the financial implications of the relation of ECWA headquarters to Baghdad, clearly showed that the relocation to the permanent headquarters, irrespective of whether this were to take place in September 1979 or in 1980, would not entail any additional expense but would, on the contrary, be cost-saving.

115. The representative of Iraq also expressed his deep regret at the fact that the Iraqi delegation, in the course of its contacts with other delegations, had learned that certain members of the secretariat had approached a number of delegations and requested them to endeavour to postpone the ECWA transfer to Baghdad at the appointed time in September 1979. He added that his Government regarded this as an extremely serious and grave matter in which it perceived a flagrant indication of these employees' misconception of the nature of their duties.
end obligations under the Charter of the United Nations and that his Government reserved the right to pursue the matter at the highest levels in the United Nations Secretariat. The Chairman expressed his opinion that such actions, if indeed undertaken, should be regarded as the initiatives of individuals in which the Secretariat was not involved.

116. The representative of the Lebanese Republic stressed that the offer submitted by Iraq, on the basis of which it was agreed to make Baghdad the Commission's permanent headquarters, had been modified by Iraq and substituted by two rented buildings. In the opinion of the United Nations legal counsel, the transfer of the Commission from its temporary headquarters at Beirut was intrinsically linked to the construction of the buildings through the use made of the expression "should then move" and he stressed the word "then". He also thanked the Executive Secretary and the staff of the Commission for their professional conscientiousness by virtue of which they had been able to work and produce so efficiently and diligently in conditions the difficulty of which everyone was aware. He indicated that discussion of the headquarters issue and the adoption of a resolution at the present session one year before the expiry of the five-year period would have adverse repercussions and give rise to misinterpretations. On the other hand, the retention of the Commission at Beirut would be of benefit to all, bearing in mind the fact that such retention would be temporary pending the construction of the permanent headquarters.

117. At the request of the Executive Secretary Mr. Henry Jaran, Chief, Buildings Management Service, from the Office of General Services at United Nations Headquarters, gave a brief account of his visit to Baghdad to inspect the two buildings proposed as temporary offices for the secretariat in which he stated as follows:

"At the request of the Executive Secretary of ECWA, I undertook a study of the proposed temporary accommodations suitable for ECWA's interim needs to be provided in Baghdad by the Government of Iraq. These facilities are to be utilized by ECWA until the permanent headquarters can be constructed in Baghdad. The evaluation that I made did not address itself to the matter of housing, schools or other services related to staff welfare because of the time period available.

Just to identify myself for those who do not know me, I am Chief of Buildings Management Service, of the Office of General Services, Headquarters, New York.

The requirements were based on the estimated occupancy period of five years, running to September 1984. This would provide any additional time that might be required in the event of a delay in the completion of the building.

Manning table estimates for the regular budget and extrabudgetary posts were furnished by the Chief of the Division of Administration at ECWA. In the study it was understood that United Nations international standards for space allocation and environmental working conditions would apply.

Then, to summarize my report, I said in conclusion that, as stated above, the proposed two buildings would provide adequate area to meet ECWA's office space and special use requirements. These buildings, to be completed by September 1979, would require some modification to provide space allocation and environmental working conditions in accordance with the United Nations international standards. Examination of the constructions indicates, and the Iraqi engineer confirms, that the alterations can be executed with a minimum of difficulty. To meet ECWA's conference space requirements, it appears possible to provide on the site two conference rooms seating 50 to 60, with simultaneous interpretation in 3 languages. These rooms would either be located on a mezzanine level in the buildings, or would be at ground level in a 1-storey structure that is also proposed there.

Commission plenary meetings, however, which require a capacity of 250 with interpretation, would have to be conducted in off-site premises and I inspected some of those that are immediately available, either in hotels or clubs. The final requirement was parking for the staff and it was determined that adequate parking facilities will be provided on the site."

118. Two draft resolutions on the permanent headquarters were submitted to the Commission which adopted resolution 52 (V) by a majority of 8 votes in a closed meeting.

Other business

(a) The regional plan of action for the integration of women in development in the countries of Western Asia

119. The Executive Secretary of the Commission opened the discussion on the regional plan of action for the integration of women in development in the ECWA region (document E/ECWA/69) by reviewing the resolutions and activities within the United Nations system which had led to the formulation of the regional plan of action for Western Asia. In 1972, the Economic and Social Council declared, and the General Assembly endorsed, that 1975 would be International Women's Year. In 1974, the General Assembly called upon member Governments, specialized agencies and regional commissions to implement the work programme of the International Women's Year and in 1975 a World Conference of the International Women's Year was held which resulted in a World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year.

120. In the World Plan of Action, first priority was given to action at the regional level and to the role of the United Nations regional commissions. The General Assembly requested the organs of the United Nations, including the regional commissions, to conduct an annual review of their activities related to the Plan and to develop and implement effective strategies to achieve the objectives of the Plan at the regional level. On that basis the member States of the Commission at its second session called upon the Executive Secretary to intensify the activity of the secretariat in the field.

121. The Executive Secretary explained that the Commission had prepared a draft regional plan on this subject, which was submitted to a meeting of experts from member States in April 1978 in order to obtain comments and to seek the necessary recommendations of the Governments of the region. In May 1978 the Regional Conference on the Integration of Arab Women in Development in the ECWA Region was held at the invitation of the United Nations Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs and ECWA which represented the first United Nations conference on the integration of women in development in the ECWA region in which the States of the region put forward a regional Plan of Action on the subject. That Plan included action proposals in 11 fields, ranging from planning to legislation, implementation and evaluation, and also made recommendations for the ECWA work programme in the field of the participation of women in development.

122. The Executive Secretary stated that the Consultative Committee of the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women had approved the projects proposed by ECWA, which were aimed at increasing the participation of women through training.

123. The representative of Iraq requested that the Plan of Action adopted by the regional conference (E/ECWA/69/Add.1) be included among the documents for the fifth session and indicated that "The Role of Women in Development" would have been a better title than "The Integration of Women in Development" since integration would seem to imply that women were not yet participating in the process when, in fact, they were participating in various ways, although perhaps not at the desired levels. He also noted several areas which were overlooked in document E/ECWA/69 such as the role of women in politics, female illiteracy, the role of women in efforts to improve their situation, the manner in which the system of assessing the Plan in the region would be implemented, and the proposed means of co-ordination between the Commission and the member States in the field.

124. The representative of Jordan regretted that the document had not been presented earlier so that its background could have been studied more thoroughly. He said that the Arab Women's Committee, referred to in the document, should co-ordinate its activities with the Bureau of Women's Affairs in the Arab League. He emphasized that the issues surrounding the question of women in development were reflections of the conditions in society as a whole and that the position of women should not be treated in isolation from other social issues. He added that, in order to avoid duplication, the proposed collection of data on women should be undertaken by the Statistics Unit of ECWA and that the publications on women and development by other United Nations and regional organizations should be considered before a guide is produced by ECWA.

125. The representative of the Women's International Democratic Federation, in commenting on this subject, reminded the Commission that 1979 had been declared the International Year of the Child. She expressed the support of the Women's International Democratic Federation for this declaration and emphasized the connexion between the situation of women and children and the economic, political and social situation in every country. She said that the Federation would hold several bilateral, regional and international meetings on this subject, including one in the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen for all the women's organizations in the Arabian Peninsula and the Gulf States. Also, in 1979, a round-table conference on the life and problems of children in Lebanon would be held. She further expressed the hope that ECWA would participate in the planning and preparation of the International Year of the Child.

126. The representative of Kuwait emphasized that the subject of women's participation in development was not only a question of equality but also an economic one closely connected with the human capabilities needed by the Arab world to further the process of development.
127. The secretariat emphasized that the Plan of Action had already been approved by Governments and that resolutions to implement the Plan in ECWA should come from the Commission. It stressed that women should play a role in the development plans of member countries. It also indicated that efforts would be exerted within ECWA to provide more detailed statistics on the situation of women in the region and that the proposed publication of a Guide on Women in Development would be geared specifically towards Arab women.

(b) Report on the participation of ECWA in preparation of the United Nations Conference on Science and Technology for Development

128. The secretariat reviewed the ECWA contribution to the preparations for the United Nations Conference on Science and Technology for Development and referred to the First Regional Preparatory Meeting held at Beirut from 19 to 21 December 1977 and the Second Regional Preparatory Meeting held at Amman from 12 to 15 September 1978. The secretariat also referred to the fact that preparations for the above-mentioned Conference were also made at the national level since each of the Commission's member States was requested to prepare a country paper indicating the country's experiences and problems in the utilization of science and technology for development purposes. In connexion with the Second Regional Preparatory Meeting for the Conference, the secretariat noted that document R/ECWA/71 containing the report on the Second Regional Preparatory Meeting incorporated a general review of the country papers and of the discussions that took place regarding the draft regional report. Final recommendations had also subsequently been submitted to the secretariat of the Conference and the recommendations had been distributed at the present session as document R/ECWA/70. The secretariat also explained that the recommendations constituted the second part of the regional report and that the first part, containing a general review of the situation in the region, was being prepared. The whole report would be sent to the member States as soon as it was completed. The regional report would be distributed as a background document at the Conference and, as such, would not be discussed there. The secretariat further explained that the recommendations of the Second Regional Meeting at the national, regional and international levels constituted the ECWA contribution to the Plan of Action to be established by the Conference secretariat.

Recognizing further the need for greater co-operative efforts in cartographic activities in the Arab region,

Taking note of the draft proposals contained in document E/ECWA/56/Add.1 for establishing a cartography programme,

1. Requests the Executive Secretary to submit a report on the need to establish a cartography unit within the framework of the ECWA secretariat;

2. Requests further the Executive Secretary to consider ways and means to commence cartographic activities before the medium-term plan period 1980-1983.

63 (v). The establishment of subsidiary bodies

The Economic Commission for Western Asia,

Referring to rules 16, 17, 18 and 19 of the Commission's provisional rules of procedure setting out the procedures for establishing subsidiary bodies,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 32/162 entitled "Institutional arrangements for international co-operation in the field of human settlements" which calls upon regional commissions to consider the establishment of regional committees on human settlements,

Recognizing the importance of subsidiary bodies both for the work of the secretariat and the Commission's role in global policy-making,

Having noted the report of the Executive Secretary, E/ECWA/58,

1. Requests the Executive Secretary to prepare a detailed study on the modalities and possibilities for establishing subsidiary bodies of the Commission in consultation with Arab and international organizations and member States;

2. Requests further the Executive Secretary to submit the study to the Commission at its sixth session.

10th meeting
6 October 1978

64 (v). A programme of action in favour of the least developed countries

The Economic Commission for Western Asia,

Recalling its resolution 38 (IV), which requested the Executive Secretary in operative paragraph 1 "to convey to the United Nations Office for Technical Co-operation and to the United Nations Development Programme the desire of the Economic Commission for Western Asia that they reconsider their position on the financing of the project so as to ensure its continuity"; and which in operative paragraph 2 "urges the countries of the ECWA region that have the financial capability, and also the Arab funds and the League of Arab States, to make appropriate contributions within the limits of the budgetary estimates submitted by the Executive Secretary",

Taking into consideration the follow-up measures to resolution 38 (IV) indicated in document E/ECWA/59, and observing that sources of financing existed which ECWA had not yet had the opportunity to contact,

Appreciating the services that the United Nations Regional Project for Public Finance and Administration offers the Sultanate of Oman, the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen and the Yemen Arab Republic, which are all among the least developed of the developing countries receiving special consideration from the United Nations,

Affirming the continuing need of these countries for the services of the project,
1. Requests the Executive Secretary to convey to the United Nations Office for Technical Co-operation for Development the desire of the Economic Commission for Western Asia that the project continue to be financed for the second year of the present course 1978-1979;

2. Requests the Executive Secretary to pursue his efforts with countries of the ECWA region and outside it, urging them to participate in financing the project within the limits of the budgetary estimates made for this purpose for a period of three years;

3. Strongly requests the Executive Secretary to follow up this subject and to submit a report thereon to the Commission at its sixth regular session.

65 (v). Establishment of an agency for the reconstruction of Lebanon

The Economic Commission for Western Asia,

Recalling resolution 24 (III) which invited the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Western Asia to extend all possible assistance for the reconstruction and development of Lebanon,

Further recalling resolution 40 (IV) which invited the Executive Secretary to initiate immediate consultations with the President of the Reconstruction and Development Council with a view to establishing a technical assistance development programme and to make the necessary contacts to this effect,

Considering that the needs of Lebanon exceed the means within the capacity of the Economic Commission for Western Asia and its Executive Secretary and that a special full-time agency with its own organization and staff is therefore required for the reconstruction of Lebanon,

Requests the Executive Secretary to recommend that the Secretary-General of the United Nations submit to the General Assembly a resolution for the establishment of an agency to be designated "The United Nations Agency for the Reconstruction of Lebanon", the methods of funding and management and the rules of procedure of which would be defined by agreement between the two parties.

66 (v). Strengthening the ECWA programme in the area of increasing the participation of women in development

The Economic Commission for Western Asia,

Noting General Assembly resolution 3520 (XXX) of 15 December 1975, which called upon the regional commissions to give first priority to the development and implementation of effective strategies for achieving the objectives of the World
Plan of Action for increasing the participation of women in development at the regional level and at the national level, taking into account the respective circumstances and priorities of each country,

Recalling its unanimous resolution 17 (II) of 9 May 1975 requesting the Executive Secretary to intensify the secretariat's activities in this field,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1850 (LVI) of 16 May 1974 establishing the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women,

Taking note of the approval of the Consultative Committee of the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women of the projects submitted by ECWA and the agreement to finance them and to finance other technical assistance projects for a period of two years,

Having examined the Regional Plan of Action for the Integration of Arab Women in Development in the ECWA region adopted by the regional conference which was held at Amman from 29 May to 4 June 1978 and which called for strengthening ECWA programmes on women so that the secretariat could confront the growing responsibilities of the 1976-1985 Decade for Women,

1. Adopts the recommendations of the Regional Plan of Action related to the responsibilities of ECWA in the field of women and development;

2. Urges the Executive Secretary to intensify efforts to implement these recommendations through the necessary programmes and activities;

3. Requests the Executive Secretary to submit a report to the Commission at its sixth session embodying proposals for obtaining additional funds for strengthening the Commission's programme in the area of the participation of women in development.
