Human Rights Indicators

Conceptual and Methodological Framework

What to monitor, how to collect information and interpret it from a human rights perspective?
Human Rights-Based Approach to Data (HRBAD)

6 Key Principles

- Participation
- Disaggregation
- Self-identification
- Transparency
- Privacy
- Accountability
Strengthening cooperation between statistics and human rights

“Our signing of the MoU with the Human Rights Commission is a great milestone in the development of official statistics”
- Zachary Mwangi, Kenya Bureau of Statistics

Palestine, Kenya, Uganda, Liberia, Kosovo, Albania, Mexico, Moldova, Mongolia, Philippines
Human Rights Indicators (HRI)

We make available relevant, robust, and internationally comparable indicators on the human rights enjoyment by all.

Human Rights-Based Approach to Data (HRBAD)

We show how data can be produced following international human rights and statistical standards while putting people at the center.

National stakeholders

We work with national actors to foster institutional collaboration and create accountability across institutions.

The people and their communities

We facilitate and harness contributions from all parts of society to drive human rights implementation.
