Introduction

1. The present document provides an overview of the technical cooperation and advisory services provided by the ESCWA Centre for Women to member States over the biennium 2016-2017, pursuant to the recommendations issued by the Committee on Women at its seventh session. Building on progress accomplished in member States, the Centre for Women works closely with national women's machineries, national stakeholders, relevant United Nations entities, regional organizations, and all divisions within ESCWA to address ongoing challenges that continue to undermine women's rights. Recent political developments in various Arab countries also highlight the fragility of women's situation, prompting the need to protect acquired rights while enhancing women's involvement in post-conflict and transitional processes.
2. ESCWA member States participating in the seventh session of the Committee on Women adopted the Muscat Declaration: Towards the Achievement of Gender Justice in the Arab Region, in which they affirmed their commitment to jointly work towards achieving gender justice as a foundation for achieving sustainable development and security in the Arab region. They also reaffirmed their commitment to implementing women's rights as stipulated by international treaties. They acknowledged the need to adopt a comprehensive approach to gender justice that ensured accountability by establishing effective national mechanisms, and achieving equality by eliminating all forms of discrimination between men and women. Member States also recognized their responsibility to monitor and implement the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), especially SDG5 on gender equality and its related targets as a key regional and national priority.
3. To address the needs of member States and support them in fulfilling their commitments, ESCWA has intensified its efforts to translate its normative work and the findings of its evidence-based research into capacity-building packages to enhance the knowledge and skills of member States, and ultimately transmit this knowledge to national counterparts. ESCWA had also worked closely with member States to support them in adapting the SDGs to the national context, and analysing the relevance of national strategies to SDG5.
4. To maintain a focused and interrelated working approach, the Centre for Women has identified the following priority areas for its technical advisory services, in line with its work programme: gender justice; violence against women; and women, peace and security. In addition to those three areas of work, ESCWA has adopted a twin-track approach to its technical advisory services on the SDGs. Firstly, it has linked its work on those three thematic areas to SDG 5, as relevant. Secondly, it has provided dedicated technical support on SDG5.
5. ESCWA work on gender justice encompasses the principles of accountability and gender equality. To operationalize the broad concept of gender justice, ESCWA technical advisory work focuses on strengthening accountability mechanisms at the legislative and institutional levels, and on addressing all forms of discrimination at the social, economic, civil and political levels.
6. ESCWA realizes that addressing violence against women is at the heart of SDG5 and its targets. Numerous other international and regional instruments also tackle violence against women, such as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Despite this recognition that highlights the need for data collection and action at the legislative and institutional levels, additional national and regional efforts are needed to address the phenomenon. Accordingly, ESCWA efforts are geared towards guiding member States in the formulation of national strategies and legislation to address this salient issue. ESCWA has also provided tailor-made support to raise awareness and build the capacity of member States on the economic cost of violence against women as a tool for policy reform.
7. Realizing the disproportionate impact of conflict on women and the importance of strengthening the role of women in times of peace and conflict, ESCWA pays special attention to the issue of women, peace and security. It focuses on strengthening the capacity of various institutions in member States to implement Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and its subsequent resolutions that comprise the women, peace and security agenda. In response to member States' requests to enhance understanding and improve responses to this agenda, ESCWA initiatives focus on supporting member States in identifying key issues and priorities at the national and regional levels, providing technical assistance for the development of national action plans, and supporting platforms for participatory and inclusive dialogue at the regional and national levels. This has built on a wealth of research and knowledge that ESCWA has accumulated over the past few years.

8. In addition to specialized technical assistance in the three thematic areas, ESCWA has integrated a gender perspective in most of its advisory missions. For example, capacity building workshops on information, communication and technology were held in the Sudan for the Academy of ICT Essentials for Government Leaders, high-level security officials, parliamentary delegates, journalists and labour unions, to highlight women's role in information, communication and technology and its relationship to socioeconomic development.

9. Drawing on established partnerships and previous achievements, the Centre for Women has continued to enhance regional synergy and collaboration between member States to respond to the requirements of relevant international instruments and global agreements through regional and subregional frameworks, such as joint strategies, platforms, appeals, and action plans. ESCWA has partnered with several United Nations agencies, such as the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN Women) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to deliver its advisory services.

10. Acknowledging the role of civil society organizations and their complementary role in achieving gender equality, ESCWA technical advisory services are not limited to national women's machineries, but include non-governmental organizations such as the Lebanese Council for Women, the Geneva Institute for Human Rights, and Besme International Group for Humanitarian Assistance. This approach has expanded ESCWA outreach to a greater pool of activists and non-governmental organizations, and facilitated the establishment of a common position between non-governmental organizations and national Governments on women, peace and security. This is reflected in ESCWA interventions in Libya and Tunisia to enable civil society organizations to better engage with the Government in the area of women, peace and security. Furthermore, ESCWA worked closely with Yemeni female activists to amplify their contribution to the peacebuilding process in Yemen.

11. ESCWA uses diversified methods in providing technical assistance, including holding regional workshops on topics of regional interest such as the SDGs, and organizing national workshops to support priority national initiatives. Technical advice is also provided on a one-to-one basis to build the capacity of officials or activists. ESCWA support ranges from developing capacity-building packages to producing audiovisual materials, such as videos on women, peace and security, aimed at disseminating information to a wide range of stakeholders in member States.

III. TECHNICAL COOPERATION MATERIAL

14. In its efforts to capitalize on the work of the Subcommittee on Gender Equality and the SDGs, the ESCWA Centre for Women developed the Guide to Global Gender Targets, which provides an alignment between the SDGs and the Beijing Platform for Action to facilitate the reporting process.* This newly developed guide aims to simplify national reporting on the implementation of the SDGs, and avoid duplicating reporting efforts. By facilitating national reviews, this guide contributes to the regional reviews coordinated by United Nations agencies and the League of Arab States in the context of the SDGs and the Beijing Platform for Action for the period 2019-2020. The guide, produced in English and Arabic, is consistent with recommendations in the 2030 Agenda, which states that effective linkages can be made between its follow-up and review mechanisms and the review arrangements of all relevant United Nations conferences and processes.

15. Moreover, in partnership with UN Women and the League of Arab States, ESCWA produced a publication to review Arab national strategies on women and assess their compatibility with the SDGs, particularly SDG5 on gender equality. The analysis reveals gaps in current strategies, highlighted by country and under each target of SDG5 and other gender-related SDG targets. Member States were informed of the study's results to bridge gaps in their current strategies.
