Each round table produced recommendations touching on various technical, political and procedural aspects of the topic covered.

313 (XXVII). Frequency of sessions of the Technical Committee on Liberalization of Foreign Trade, Economic Globalization and Financing for Development in the Countries of the ESCWA Region

The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia,

Mindful of its resolution 290 (XXV) of 29 May 2008 concerning the follow-up on the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus in member countries,

Recalling its resolution 219 (XX) of 27 May 1999 concerning the frequency of sessions of the subsidiary bodies of ESCWA, stipulating that the sessions of the Technical Committee on Liberalization of Foreign Trade, Economic Globalization and Financing for Development in the Countries of the ESCWA Region shall be held biennially,

Recalling also its resolution 214 (XIX) of 7 May 1997, which provided for the establishment of a technical committee on liberalization of foreign trade and economic globalization in the countries of the ESCWA region, whose meetings are held annually,

Aware of the role of foreign trade and financing for development in promoting economic growth and strengthening regional integration,

Decides that the ESCWA Technical Committee on Liberalization of Foreign Trade, Economic Globalization and Financing for Development shall hold its sessions annually rather than biennially, taking effect in 2013.

III. RECOMMENDATIONS

5. Representatives of member countries participating in the senior officials segment of the ESCWA twenty-seventh session discussed agenda items including, notably, the report of the Executive Secretary on the activities of the Commission; management issues; and the draft strategic framework for the biennium 2014-2015. They also considered the requests of Libya, Morocco and Tunisia for membership in the Commission. The senior officials expressed their gratitude to Jordan, which had occupied the Chair of the twenty-sixth session of the Commission, and their wishes for success to the United Arab Emirates, which assumed the Chair of the current session. Discussions concluded with a number of recommendations, as follows:

1. Stress the importance of ESCWA’s commitment to a results- and achievement-based management approach to assess the effectiveness of each of the seven subprogrammes on the basis of precisely defined indicators and benchmarks that focus on quality rather than quantity of services, using a methodology that identifies impacts, outcomes, shortcomings and potential future improvements;

2. Stress the importance of coordination with official sources when gathering statistical data, with a view to avoiding inconsistency by standardizing definitions adopted by various sources, and creating a series of accurate, up-to-date and high-quality data based on official records that can be used for comparative purposes as a reliable tool to measure performance;

3. Stress the principle of shared responsibility between member countries and the secretariat for following up the implementation of resolutions, since resolutions included commitments on the part of both the secretariat and member countries, therefore requiring the involvement of both parties in following up the implementation;

4. Submit a recommendation to the Economic and Social Council that the requests of Libya, Morocco and Tunisia for membership in ESCWA be approved;

5. Draft reports on the Commission programme performance in a concise format that includes indicators of achievement that allow member countries to form a clear picture of the outcomes and impacts of projects;

6. Enhance coordination with focal points in each country and provide them with regular updates on all activities being conducted by ESCWA in their countries;

7. Enhance cooperation between ESCWA and international and regional organizations, and academic and private-sector institutions in implementing specialized programmes in order to facilitate exchange of experiences in various areas with the relevant organization or institution, with focal points being kept fully informed of all developments;

8. Supplement recommendations that address issues of common concern with recommendations that address the particular situations and economic and social development priorities of individual countries, to serve as practical guidelines for designing actionable general and sectoral policies;

9. Submit justifications for amendments proposed to the programme of work after its approval, including those based on emerging needs and developments in the countries of the region, and identify the criteria on the basis of which particular activities and programmes are reformulated, amended or added;

10. Emphasize the role of ESCWA in achieving development in the region, while recognizing that the nature and orientation of that role is affected by emerging political conditions that have an impact on the course of economic and social development in all sectors;

11. Submit member country comments on the draft strategic framework in written form for consideration and action by the secretariat, notably the recommendation that the strategic framework should include a section for each subprogramme identifying sources of information and mechanisms to verify fulfilment of indicators of achievement.
IV. ISSUES FOR CONSIDERATION AND DISCUSSION

A. REQUESTS BY STATES MEMBERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS AND/OR ITS SPECIALIZED AGENCIES THAT ARE NOT MEMBERS OF THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COMMISSION FOR WESTERN ASIA (ESCWA) TO PARTICIPATE AS OBSERVERS IN THE TWENTY-SEVENTH SESSION OF THE COMMISSION

(Agenda item 4)

6. Article 63 of the Rules of Procedure of the Economic and Social Commission for West Asia states that the Commission may invite any State Member of the United Nations or of a specialized agency that is not a member of the Commission to participate in its deliberations on any matter which the Commission considers to be of particular concern to that State. A State thus invited shall not have the right to vote, but may submit proposals which may be put to the vote at the request of any member of the Commission.

7. In accordance with that article, the secretariat informed the Commission, meeting in its twenty-seventh session, of such requests received for consideration and action. Requests to participate as observers in the twenty-seventh session were received from States Members of the United Nations that are not members of ESCWA, namely Algeria, Australia, Brazil, Comoros, Japan, Morocco, Romania, Tunisia and Ukraine. The Commission approved those requests. It should be noted that Morocco has permanent observer status at all ESCWA sessions. Similar requests were received from a number of United Nations organizations and bodies.

B. POLICY ISSUES IN THE ESCWA REGION

(Agenda item 5)

8. The Commission held three round tables on the following topics: (1) The role of participation and social justice in achieving sustainable and balanced development; (2) The preparations for Rio+20 in the Arab region; and (3) Inclusive financing for small and medium-sized enterprises and creating job opportunities.

1. The role of participation and social justice in achieving sustainable and balanced development

9. A round table was held on the topic of the role of participation and social justice in achieving sustainable and balanced development, which had been selected as the main theme of the session following the endorsement of the Technical Committee at its sixth meeting (Beirut, December 2011) of the proposals made by the secretariat with respect to the theme for the twenty-seventh session of the Commission.

10. Mr. Yousef Abu Safieh, Chairman of Environment Quality Authority, Palestine, moderator of the round table, said that the major components of sustainable development were education; health care; participation of all social groups in decision-making; decent work opportunities for all especially women; social justice, which meant equitable distribution of resources; fairness for all social groups; and environment protection.

11. A representative of the secretariat, referring to document E/ESCWA/27/4(Part I) made a presentation on the role of participation and social justice in achieving sustainable and balanced development, focusing on the principal areas in which participation could be increased and on the major challenges facing governments in achieving sustainable and balanced development for the benefit of future generations. A measurement methodology was needed that took into account all three of the economic, social and environmental dimensions of development.

12. Ms. Hooria Mashhur, Minister of Human Rights, Yemen, panelist, said that social imbalances, especially unequal treatment of rural areas and women, were the main causes of the youth and popular... movements in her country. Lack of access to education, a high maternal mortality rate, low education levels among girls, exclusion of women in economic activities, and the large number of workers in the informal sector whose contributions did not show up in national accounts were all problems that needed to be addressed. Potential remedies included domestic and foreign investment to increase work opportunities, involvement of the private sector in rebuilding the economy, and practical steps to rebuild the State, of which the most significant was a law on transitional justice and a national dialogue that would be inclusive of all groups, especially young people and women, in addition to an initiative undertaken by the countries of the Gulf Cooperation Council to lead a political settlement.

13. Mr. Sharbel Nahhas, Former Minister of Labour, Lebanon, panelist, said that he had noted a new language in the discourse of international organizations that sought to translate ideas into actions. Social justice was crucial to development, but it was difficult to define that concept in the absence of clearly defined indicators. Well-being required a balance among three equally important factors: the family, the State and the market. When the State was weak, the family component could become sectarian and tribal. The high level of unease in the Arab region which was attributable to both domestic factors and fear of outside forces directed the priorities towards steering clear of conflict instead of achieving prosperity and rights. The scramble for quick solutions could hinder efforts to achieve sustainability in development.

14. In the ensuing discussion, delegates suggested that developed countries could increase their support for sustainable development efforts in developing countries by removing burdensome trade conditions, controlling food prices, relieving external debt, and refraining from the use of economic sanctions for political purposes. There was a reciprocal relationship between sustainable development and social justice. Justice could be achieved only by ending corruption, enabling the people to participate in the decision-making, formulating, implementing and monitoring development policies, and promoting more active participation by all social groups, especially women and young people.

15. Participants drew attention to the need to provide more up-to-date and accurate statistical data in cooperation with national statistical offices, to rely on official government sources for statistics as they best reflected the reality, and to verify figures with member countries before publishing them. The same statistical categories should not be used for all countries, but should vary depending on the level of development reached by each country. It was proposed that an urbanization indicator be developed along with mechanisms for monitoring poverty in urban areas and social disparities between urban and rural areas.

16. Member country representatives stressed the importance of promoting participation and social justice in achieving development and sustainability. Those components became even more pressing with the political and social changes taking shape in the region. People have clearly expressed their aspirations for exercising their right to participate in and harness the benefits of development. Decision makers should bear in mind the aspirations and needs of the people, especially marginalized groups, in the planning process which directs all development achievements and outcomes.

17. They also stressed that social justice and participation were enshrined in international covenants and charters and national constitutions and laws. They constituted pillars of good governance and social coherence which continued to play a significant role in addressing the challenges faced by the region.

18. The representative of the secretariat said that there should be ongoing dialogue between ESCWA and member countries in order to ensure accurate and up-to-date statistical data. International as well as national sources should be used to facilitate comparison with other countries.

19. Participants concluded that document E/ESCWA/27/4(Part I) contained inaccurate statistics and inadequate interpretations and needed to be revised in the light of the comments of participants before being finalized. The representative of the secretariat welcomed the comments and asked participants to provide updated data and statistics for inclusion in the document.
2. The preparations for Rio+20 in the Arab region

20. A round table was held on the topic of preparations in the Arab region for the Rio+20 Conference, with a focus on a number of questions of particular relevance to the Arab region that had risen from the anticipated outcomes of the Conference: how a green economy could contribute to job creation, especially for youth; how it could be financed; what technologies would have to be acquired; how it could support a water-energy-food nexus approach; and what institutional framework would best support sustainable development objectives in the Arab region.

21. Ms. Wafaa Dikah Hamzé, consultant for the project to establish a National Observatory for Women in Agriculture and Rural Areas and Former Minister of State, Lebanon, moderator of the round table, emphasized the importance of the Arab preparations for the Rio+20 Conference. She summarized the themes of the Conference and stressed the importance of that global event and the impact it would have on the course of sustainable development.

22. A representative of the secretariat, referring to document E/ESCWA/27/4(Part II), gave a presentation on preparations in the Arab region for the Rio+20 Conference, highlighting the Arab countries’ position concerning the themes and objectives of the Conference as set out in the Arab Declaration on the Rio+20 Conference issued by the Council of Arab Ministers Responsible for the Environment. The expected outcomes of the Conference were presented as well as issues of special importance to the Arab region. The presentation highlighted the post-Rio+20 Conference expected action and offered recommendations to help member countries bring to the Conference a consensus that would serve their interests and those of the region at that important event.

23. Mr. Srinivas Tata, Deputy Director, Regional Commissions New York Office, panelist, spoke about the negotiations on the outcome document of the Conference which took place during April and May 2012 in New York with the participation of representatives of governments and political groups who discussed the Zero Draft and the various positions towards it.

24. Mr. Yousef Abu Safieh, panelist, tackled the issue of achieving sustainable development under occupation and with significant disparities in resource distribution. Sustainable development is an unrealistic goal under occupation, where merely precursors of development could be mentioned. Development meant freedom, security, human and environmental health, economic and social development, and a better quality of life for present and future generations. Under occupation, people were deprived of their basic needs. Even where the political will for sustainable development existed, and even where it had been incorporated into legislation, the occupation made it impossible to implement for a variety of reasons, including lack of geographic continuity between regions, limited control over land and resources, land confiscation, and impediments to the exercise of national sovereignty over natural resources as recognized under international law.

25. Ms. Mémia Benna Zayani, Minister of Environment, Tunisia, panelist, endorsed the principles of the Arab Declaration on the Rio+20 Conference, and stressed the importance of adhering to the principles of the Earth Summit and enhancing the political commitment to achieving sustainable development in the region. The green economy was a qualitative step forward and a challenge for the future. A standard, precise, internationally agreed definition of the green economy was needed for the purpose of building a new international development partnership that embraced the concept as a cornerstone of sustainable development adopting an integrated approach while remaining mindful of social and cultural specificities. A modern economy was unimaginable in isolation from an environmental economy that took into account the unique natural characteristics of each geographic region, achieved integration among them and increased their competitiveness. Implementing a green economy would require assigning an economic value to natural capital, both renewable and non-renewable, as well as possessing the capacity to acquire knowledge and technological innovation, create green jobs, and combat poverty. The environmental degradation and resource depletion that had already occurred were impetus enough to push forward with the consensus on the need to rethink current national models of development.

26. Mr. Najib Saab, Secretary-General, Arab Forum for Environment and Development, Lebanon, panelist, said that the green economy was not an end itself, but should be discussed in the light of its potential to promote sustainable development. The green economy should be part of the economic pillar of development which is one of three pillars including social and environmental pillars. The term “green economy” emerged in the wake of the global economic and financial collapse in 2008, when it was hoped that the shock of that crisis could be exploited to rebuild the global economy on a more balanced basis that gave due weight to the environment. One of the main demands that the citizens of Arab cities were taking to the street was decent work opportunities. It had been shown that the change to a green economy would create millions of decent and secure job opportunities, and would also promote better management of resources to protect the rights of future generations.

27. He added that development strategies in the Arab region were based on the export of raw materials, which led to depletion of resources and did not generate many jobs, just as unemployment in certain countries was climbing to extremely high levels, especially among the young. The question was the extent to which the green economy could help solve that problem by using such sustainable agricultural methods as more efficient water consumption, and the development of organic farming through regional cooperation and appropriate technology. Many Arab countries had already taken promising steps towards sustainable development.

28. In the ensuing discussion, participants touched on the capacity of the green economy to solve such problems as indebtedness, poverty, ignorance, and the conflicts that afflicted developing and least developed countries. They also addressed the costs, funding mechanisms and implementation tools that would be involved in the move towards a green economy; the capacity of the green economy to create jobs in labour-intensive sectors such as agriculture, as opposed to sectors that depended on capital consumption; the nature and distribution of those jobs as well as their added value to the economy. The green economy needed to be discussed with an eye on the labour supply and demand in all countries of the region and the difficulties involved in transferring and nationalizing technology in the Arab countries given the long standing technological edge of the developed countries.

29. Participants indicated that numerous measures had been taken in the spirit of the green economy and sustainable development. However, the drive to promote the green economy without an agreed-upon definition continued to be a source of debate and disagreement, with some countries embracing the concept while others continued to regard it as vague and in need of clarification. There was no rejection of the concept but a need to elucidate its ambiguity and clarify its consequences on the various economic and social sectors, especially whether jobs created by the green economy would be at the expense of certain sectors, or at the expense of some countries for the benefit of others.

30. Cooperation for technology transfer remained limited, and increasing it would require considerable support to developing countries from developed countries, which would have to stand by their commitments and guarantee resources not only to transfer technology but to enable Arab countries to develop and produce technology locally with a view to moving towards technological parity given the long standing technological edge of the developed countries.

31. Participants indicated that a set of solutions and issues should be defined, on which developing countries needed to reach agreement and that could serve as the basis of an international moral commitment for the new century. That commitment should be founded on the principles of shared but differentiated responsibility, to ensure equity to countries suffering from such perennial problems as occupation, conflict, and non-development-friendly exploitation of resources, guarantee sustainable development and narrow the gap between the envisioned future and reality as currently experienced.
32. Discussions concluded with the agreement that the green economy, rather than being a substitute for sustainable development, was a part of its economic dimension. The Arab countries needed to agree on a common definition of the green economy that converged with the Arab Declaration on the Rio+20 Conference and with their priorities, specificities, development needs and resource reserves, in order to participate in the Rio+20 Conference with a harmonized position ensuring that their interests would not be excluded from any new global commitment.

3. Inclusive financing for small and medium-sized enterprises and creating job opportunities

33. This round table was moderated by Mr. Mohamed Saleh Shelwah, Assistant Under-Secretary for Economic Policies Affairs, Ministry of Economy, United Arab Emirates. He said that lack of inclusive financing was one of the major obstacles in the Arab region. Small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) received a very small share of total lending. The main reason was lack of appropriate strategies and organized management for that sector, as SME projects were proposed without feasibility studies. Plans to encourage innovation and creativity among young people and increase the chances of SMEs being implemented should be adopted.

34. A representative of the secretariat noted the links between inclusive financing, sustainable development and social justice, and stressed the need for agreement between member countries and experts on definitions of new concepts. Ms. Rima Turk Ariss, Associate Professor of Finance School of Business, Lebanese American University and ESCWA consultant, referring to document E/ESCWA/27/4(Part III), said that inclusive financing was a development tool that could help reduce income inequality and poverty, and remove price and non-price barriers to financial services, in order to help borrowers who could not meet the conditions for high-cost financial services, could not save, or pay their dues, or afford insurance premiums, retirement plans or currency transfer fees.

35. In the Arab region, financial systems lagged behind the level of advancement achieved in other regions. Capital markets were incomplete and were not deep enough to encourage capital formation. SMEs had trouble accessing long-term financing despite their potential to contribute to job creation and sustainable growth, and their share of total lending remained minimal. Among the document’s recommendations for promoting SMEs were the following: committing to national strategies on inclusive finance, expanding financial infrastructure development, increasing competition in the provision of financial services, designing public policies for the development of SME financing, ensuring sustainability in SME access to finance, ensuring regular collection of data on SME financing, and deepening financial markets.

36. Mr. Maher Khalil Al-Hajj Al-Hassan, First Deputy Governor of the Central Bank of Jordan, panelist, said that Jordan’s approach to SME financing was based on a strategic vision that aimed to guarantee citizens access to a bundle of high-quality financial services to help them improve their economic well-being and quality of life. The main principles underlying the vision were increasing the role of the private sector as the main provider of financial services, adopting market-based finance and lending policies designed to gradually replace financial aid, and promoting greater involvement of the private sector even as the public sector retained management and monitoring duties.

37. The Bank’s priorities for the upcoming period included developing a regulatory framework for financing small-sized enterprises, establishing guidelines for internal regulation, enhancing infrastructure by establishing consumer protection mechanisms, promoting studies of obstacles to the effectiveness of initiatives, monitoring performance, and exchanging information and expertise.

38. Mr. Richard Chitwood, SME Manager, Aga Khan Agency for Microfinance, Switzerland, panelist, said that in his agency’s experience, the main challenges facing SME financing in West Asia were the lack of appropriate legislation; the increasing numbers of SMEs outside the formal sector; the lack of training, credit agencies, credit records, human resources and mortgage guarantees; and failure to differentiate between the needs of individuals and companies.
39. He offered recommendations for expanding the financial sector in the region, including the following: establish an SME licensing authority, simplify tax law, set up training centres for human and institutional capacity-building, assess the needs of institutions to increase their accessibility to financing, increase financial incentives, offer risk management assistance, create new financial products, and develop rural and agricultural projects.

40. In the ensuing discussion, representatives of various member countries described their successful experiences and initiatives in enacting laws, establishing funds, laying out controls, and devising technical and financial incentives to promote SME financing, particularly in Kuwait and Qatar. Participants stressed the need for specialized technical institutions to assist SMEs to meet financing conditions and to use financing to ensure sustainability, durability and success. Without such support, many SMEs would fail.

41. It was important to create a culture that encouraged innovation and SMEs initiatives in the Arab countries. Such a culture would enhance the success already achieved by some initiatives undertaken in the region and contributes to reducing obstacles faced by SMEs and financing institutions.

42. Participants agreed on the importance of the private sector. However, the public sector would remain important to SMEs as a source of funding that targeted social objectives such as relieving poverty and raising living standards.

43. Various obstacles prevented individuals and enterprises from deriving full benefit from existing initiatives. Those obstacles needed to be addressed in a comprehensive fashion by creating a climate in which SMEs could flourish and expand, providing training for financing providers and recipients, securing guarantees, enacting suitable legislation, conducting marketing campaigns, promoting the involvement of government sponsor institutions, and integrating the SME sector with other sectors.

44. Participants proposed that a study be conducted of SME financing to explore its potential to create jobs and reinvigorate other sectors of the economy. Different kinds of SMEs would have to be defined and categorized, and real-life experiences analysed. Inclusive financing was a strategic issue with social objectives such as reducing unemployment and poverty.

45. Participants recommended that Arab-wide cooperation should be enhanced and that Arab development funds should contribute to the promotion of SMEs, with a focus on knowledge-based enterprises.

46. Following the discussion, the representative of the secretariat said that the valuable recommendations offered by the participants would be incorporated into the next phase of the inclusive financing agenda. The role of ESCWA would be to develop training materials based on normative studies of practical needs, provide capacity-building, and facilitate dialogue for the purpose of exchanging successful experiences that could be reproduced in other countries.

47. The proposals would be followed up on at the upcoming session of the Technical Committee on Liberalization of Foreign Trade, Economic Globalization and Financing for Development in the Countries of the ESCWA Region.

C. REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY ON THE ACTIVITIES OF THE COMMISSION (Agenda item 6)

48. The Commission considered the Report of the Executive Secretary on the activities of the Commission, as contained in document E/ESCWA/27/5, which consisted of five parts.
1. Programme performance report for the biennium 2010-2011

49. A representative of the secretariat gave a presentation on the performance of the ESCWA programme of work for the biennium 2010-2011, based on document E/ESCWA/27/5(Part I). The secretariat was determined to apply a results-based approach to evaluating activities that had already been implemented and those that were still in the implementation or follow-up stages. That meant measuring results against the indicators of achievement that were set for each subprogramme during the design and preparation of the programme of work. Accordingly, the programme performance report covered achievements in each of the seven subprogrammes. It addressed measures taken within the context of general direction and management, and obstacles to the implementation of planned activities due to changing circumstances and emerging developments. The report presented several observations that might be of use for future programme planning.

50. During the ensuing discussion, delegates stressed the importance of adopting a scientific approach to evaluation based on indicators of achievement and defined benchmarks for each activity.

51. They agreed on the need to adopt common definitions of new concepts in the run-up to the Rio+20 Conference, and in particular the concept of the green economy, which would be the central focus of that Conference. Green economy needed to be defined within the context of the region’s economic and social priorities, such as reducing unemployment, creating jobs for young people and reinforcing competitive capacities.

52. It was important to take into consideration all social groups and issues when integrating economic and social policies. The benefits of economic growth should be extended to all individuals in society, and social protection should be available to all groups during periods of crisis and external shocks to the economy.

53. Given the constant stream of developments in information and communications technology (ICT), delegates called for the creation of a group within ESCWA to support the transition from traditional government services to e-government in member countries. That transition would produce gains in efficiency in the provision of public services and various other productive economic and social sectors.

54. Delegates called for more accurate, timely and higher-quality statistical data to be made available to economic and social researchers. Measurements of progress should be done on the basis of accurate data from official sources.

55. Delegates believed that ESCWA meetings, in addition to issuing recommendations on general issues of common concern, should also issue recommendations relating to the specific economic and social conditions and priorities of individual countries to serve as a guide for the formulation and implementation of general and sectoral policies.

56. Programme performance reports should be concise and objective, with performance evaluations based on defined indicators of achievement and benchmarks for each project. Such reports could then serve as a source for accurate statistical data as a result of consultations between implementing parties and the relevant countries, with objective opinions of both participants and beneficiaries and their effective contribution in evaluating the impact of any given project within their countries.

57. The representative of the secretariat said that the points raised during the discussion would be taken into consideration. The secretariat worked hard to apply a results-based approach to evaluating its programmes and activities. When it came to the market economy, ESCWA was determined to design inclusive policies that were pro-growth and ensured that economic benefits would be used in the service of society and the environment in order to achieve the ultimate goal of sustainable development.

58. The representative of the secretariat noted that there was still no common agreed-upon definition of the concept of the green economy. There continued to be wide variation of positions and levels of progress in that regard among countries. ESCWA was working for the formation of an Arab regional consensus on the green economy. It was also planning to hold a side event on generating youth employment opportunities on the margins of the Rio+20 Conference.

59. The secretariat was determined to coordinate with member countries to improve the quality of statistical data, and called for greater cooperation and consultation in that field. The best means to avoid contradictory data consisted of enhancing coordination and cooperation in collecting and updating data and identifying the sources.

2. Implementation of the resolutions adopted by the Commission at its twenty-sixth session

60. The Commission was presented with document E/ESCWA/27/5(Part II). The directors of the ESCWA divisions summarized the activities undertaken by ESCWA to implement the resolutions adopted by the Commission at its twenty-sixth session (Beirut, 17-20 May 2010). Delegates from member countries took note of the completed activities and those still being undertaken. The resolutions were as follows:

   (a) 292 (XXVI) Upgrading the Section for Emerging and Conflict-Related Issues to the level of a division and establishing a governmental committee on emerging issues and development in conflict settings;

   (b) 293 (XXVI) Upgrading the ESCWA Centre for Women to the level of a division and follow-up to the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action in the Arab countries after fifteen years: Beijing+15;

   (c) 294 (XXVI) Establishment of the ESCWA technology centre;

   (d) 295 (XXVI) Guiding Declaration of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on giving greater attention to Youth Policies: An Opportunity for Development;

   (e) 296 (XXVI) Enhancing public sector institutions and resources to attain national development goals;

   (f) 297 (XXVI) Arab MDG monitor for societal progress;

   (g) 298 (XXVI) Social development;

   (h) 299 (XXVI) Adoption of the amendments introduced to the programme of work for the biennium 2010-2011;

   (i) 301 (XXVI) Adoption of the draft strategic framework for the biennium 2012-2013.

61. A delegate said that the commitments contained in the resolutions were a joint undertaking between the secretariat and member countries, both of which were responsible for follow-up. Monitoring of progress should be done through cooperation and coordination between both sides.

62. Another delegate stressed the need for a rational approach to following up the implementation of resolutions based on tables that identified unfulfilled commitments, proposed steps to achieve them, and impact of activities implemented pursuant to those resolutions.

63. The secretariat commended those suggestions, provided that an objective mechanism containing precise indicators could be designed that would allow member countries to take part in the follow-up process, given that some of the measures called for by the resolutions were their responsibility.
3. Technical cooperation programme and regional advisory services

64. A representative of the secretariat gave a presentation on technical cooperation activities and regional advisory services undertaken by ESCWA with funding from the Regular Programme of Technical Cooperation (RPTC) and those funded by the United Nations Development Account and through extrabudgetary resources.

65. The Commission considered document E/ESCWA/27/5(Part III), which gave a detailed overview of technical cooperation activities implemented under the RPTC, aimed to contribute to building capacities of member countries through training activities, advisory services, and technical consultation for the formulation of public policies, strategies and action plans relating to all specializations. The Commission took note of achievements in implementing regional projects funded by the United Nations Development Account and through extrabudgetary resources. Progress in each technical cooperation project was measured on the basis of specified expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement for each of the seven subprogrammes. The Commission looked at the areas in which ESCWA could offer assistance that would be of benefit to member countries in each subprogramme. Activities were categorized by country and by area with focus on preparations for the Rio+20 Conference, the system of national accounts, and accelerating progress towards the Millennium Development Goals, as well as on capacity-building to improve the quality of statistical data and South-South cooperation through the exchange of experiences and successful methodologies.

66. A representative of the secretariat said that owing to its efforts during the recent period there had been an increase in extrabudgetary resources, but that ESCWA’s share of such resources continued to lag behind that of other regional commissions.

67. During the discussion, participants touched on the proportion of activities organized in cooperation with regional organizations to increase coordination and efficiency in the use of resources and derive maximum impact from implemented activities.

68. Member countries needed to be consulted in order to ensure that programme objectives were consistent with country priorities and that implementation mechanisms took into account country needs and unique characteristics. Delegates called for partnership and consultation to be extended to include proposed extrabudgetary projects all the way from the early design stages through the implementation and evaluation phases, in order to ensure responsiveness to country needs and priorities.

69. Delegates also called for strengthening relations between the Programme Planning and Technical Cooperation Division and member country focal points, stressing the joint responsibility to give that relationship an institutional framework and enhance the role of focal points as an official reference in the technical cooperation process.

70. In response to the points brought up during the discussion, the secretariat stressed the importance of partnership in determining the nature and design of technical cooperation projects. Depending on the nature of the project, the secretariat tried to include other regional actors such as the United Nations organizations, the League of Arab States and its specialized organs, and civil society organizations.

71. A large number of projects were implemented in conjunction with the League of Arab States in areas such as climate change, joint water resource management, and the formulation of regional consensuses to present at international conferences. Such projects were part of regular budget programmes and were designed in consultation with member countries through the ESCWA intergovernmental mechanism. Some were designed based on proposals from the League of Arab States or the countries themselves. Cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organs was a continuing joint endeavour between the two organizations carried out in accordance with decisions made at the highest ministerial level depending on the nature of the cooperation in question. The League of Arab States was an essential partner in all the activities of the Commission.

72. In order to integrate general issues with country priorities, technical cooperation mechanisms should be established taking into account the unique characteristics of each country and rely on best practices.

73. A delegate commended the substantial improvement in the cooperation mechanism between United Nations organizations in a number of areas, including climate change, water resources management, and monitoring progress towards the Millennium Development Goals, and expressed confidence that improvements would continue in the future.

4. Financial status of the Commission

74. A representative of the secretariat presented a review of all financial aspects of the programmes of the Commission, which included allocation of funds under the regular budget, the United Nations Development Account and extrabudgetary resources. The presentation covered the distribution of funds by programme, their allocation in accordance with needs as proposed by ESCWA’s technical divisions, and comments expressed by member countries through ESCWA’s intergovernmental mechanism and at United Nations headquarters.

75. The presentation concluded by stressing the importance of supplementing the regular budget used for analytical and normative projects with extrabudgetary resources aimed to add projects of an applied nature to respond to the increasing number of requests from member countries for technical cooperation and advisory services in economic and social areas of priority to the countries and the region.

5. Reports of the subsidiary bodies on their sessions

76. The Commission was presented with the reports of the seven subprogrammes on sessions held in the interim between the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh sessions, in addition to the reports of the Technical Committee on its meetings held during that same period. Those reports, which included recommendations, topics of discussion, organizational information, lists of participants and lists of documents, are listed below:

   (a) Report of the Statistical Committee on its ninth session (E/ESCWA/SD/2010/IG.1/10/Rev.1);
   (b) Report of the Committee on Energy on its eighth session (E/ESCWA/SDPD/2010/IG.1/6);
   (c) Report of the Committee on Social Development on its eighth session (E/ESCWA/SDD/2011/IG.1/6/Report);
   (d) Report of the Committee on Women on its fifth session (E/ESCWA/ECW/2011/IG.1/7/Report);
   (e) Report of the Technical Committee on its fifth meeting (E/ESCWA/2011/C.5/8/Report);
   (f) Report of the Committee on Water Resources on its ninth session (E/ESCWA/SDPD/2011/IG.1/8/Report);
   (g) Report of the Committee on Transport on its twelfth session (E/ESCWA/EDGD/2011/IG.1/7/Report);
   (h) Report of the Technical Committee on Liberalization of Foreign Trade, Economic Globalization and Financing for Development in the Countries of the ESCWA Region on its seventh session (E/ESCWA/EDGD/2011/IG.2/7/Report);
   (i) Report of the Technical Committee on its sixth meeting (E/ESCWA/2011/C.6/7/Report);
77. The Commission endorsed the recommendations and took note of the items contained in those reports.

D. MANAGEMENT ISSUES
(Agenda item 7)

78. The Commission considered document E/ESCWA/27/6, which consisted of two parts, namely: evaluation of the work of the Commission, and proposed amendments to the programme of work for the biennium 2012-2013.

1. Evaluation of the work of the Commission

79. Participants were informed about staff training programmes being conducted in the various divisions and sections on monitoring and evaluation mechanisms, including workshops on project planning and results-based management, designed to help devise indicators of achievement and identify expected accomplishments and impacts while drafting the strategic framework for the biennium 2014-1015.

80. ESCWA had been using a new standardized approach to evaluating the subprogramme on statistics. The evaluation concluded with recommendations in the four areas of strategic vision, management issues, institutional and priority issues in the programme of work, and coordination and partnership. In 2012, the secretariat would apply the standardized evaluation methodology to the subprogrammes on social development and ICT.

81. The evaluation undertaken by the secretariat would also include all projects being implemented through the United Nations Development Account and the intergovernmental mechanism in accordance with the priorities of the programme of work as determined by member countries and the United Nations reform plan. The secretariat would conduct a job audit with a view to ensuring maximum use of available human resources.

82. During the ensuing discussion, participants expressed the hope that the secretariat would take into account comments submitted by member countries in the preparation of the reports.

83. The secretariat was in the process of enhancing the new approach with a view to giving the evaluation process even more objectivity and credibility.

2. Proposed amendments to the programme of work for the biennium 2012-2013

84. A representative of the secretariat presented document E/ESCWA/27/6(Part II), which contained proposed amendments to the programme of work for the biennium 2012-2013. The amendments were made pursuant to new mandates entrusted to ESCWA by the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session, and in response to global and regional needs and challenges that had emanated since the Commission had adopted the programme of work for the biennium 2012-2013 at its twenty-sixth session.

85. Delegates took note of the amendments and expressed their understanding of the operational need for them, provided that the reasons behind them would be further clarified and a clear distinction would be made between activities that were being amended and those that were being fundamentally changed, with a clear basis for categorizing activities as either additional or reformulated.

86. Stressing that the role of ESCWA is in the economic and social realms rather than political, participants wondered about the extent of the connection between amendments to the programme of work and political changes in some countries of the region, and also about the reason for the cancellation of the activities relating to the youth under subprogramme 7 despite the growing importance of youth in the Arab region.
87. Participants called for cooperation to be expanded to include not only the League of Arab States but also other United Nations organizations, non-governmental organizations and academic institutions. Reports should include implementation programmes designed to transform recommendations into actionable policies.

88. In response to comments made by participants, the representative of the secretariat noted that ESCWA remained fully seized of the changes happening in the region, because the political situation represented a verdict on economic and social conditions, and because those changes were posing new economic and social challenges to member countries and ESCWA. Youth was very much at the heart of the economic and social projects of ESCWA, but the proposed activity in question had been cancelled to avoid duplication of work, since there was a similar activity in another subprogramme.

E. REVISED DRAFT STRATEGIC FRAMEWORK FOR THE BIENNIUM 2014-2015
(Agenda item 8)

89. A representative of the secretariat presented document E/ESCWA/27/7, which contained the revised draft strategic framework for the biennium 2014-2015, and gave an overview of the orientation, focus areas, objective and expected accomplishments for each of the seven subprogrammes.

90. During the ensuing discussion, delegates pointed out the need to develop a logical scope for the strategic framework. It should contain a component identifying the sources of information on the basis of which achievements were assessed, and verification mechanisms to further improve the performance evaluation process. Precise indicators of achievement focusing on quality of outputs should be adopted in order to avoid any ambiguity in measuring performance.

91. Delegates also proposed adding a component on secure and productive investment to the subprogramme on integrated management of natural resources for sustainable development; expanding the regional integration project in the subprogramme on economic development and integration to include such areas as digital content and e-services; placing focus on the environmental accounts system in the subprogramme on statistics for evidence-based policymaking; and devoting due attention to training and decent work for young people in the subprogramme on conflict mitigation and development, given that rising unemployment among youth was a major contributing factor to conflicts. An appropriate performance indicator for the latter might be the responsiveness of member country labour markets to the needs and aspirations of young people. Delegates also requested further clarification of the role of ESCWA in support of member countries to achieve the Millennium Development Goals.

92. In response to the points raised by delegates, the representative of the secretariat pointed out that the new evaluation mechanism was based on indicators that measure quality rather than just quantity of services. The integration question was at the heart of the development programme. Supporting countries in the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals was a joint effort by all the international organizations, each within its particular area of competence. ESCWA was active on the national level in support of member countries achieving progress toward those Goals within the relevant timeframes.

93. The Commission endorsed the revised draft strategic framework for the biennium 2014-2015. The secretariat requested member countries to submit their comments in writing and to maintain regular channels of communication on any particular proposal or project.

F. CONSIDERATION OF THE REQUESTS OF LIBYA, MOROCCO AND TUNISIA FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE COMMISSION
(Agenda item 9)

94. The Commission decided to submit a recommendation to the Economic and Social Council that the requests of Libya, Morocco and Tunisia for membership in ESCWA be approved.
G. DATE AND VENUE OF THE TWENTY-EIGHTH SESSION OF THE COMMISSION
(Agenda item 10)

95. It was decided that the Commission would hold its twenty-eighth session in May 2014. Iraq offered to host the twenty-eighth session. A decision in that regard would be made after consultations.

H. OTHER MATTERS
(Agenda item 11)

96. No proposals were received under this agenda item.

V. ADOPTION OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSION ON ITS TWENTY-SEVENTH SESSION

97. At its plenary closing session, held on 10 May 2012, the Commission adopted the draft report on its twenty-seventh session, with the resolutions and recommendations included in the report, on the understanding that the agreed amendments would be incorporated therein.

VI. ORGANIZATION OF WORK

A. DATE AND VENUE

98. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia held its twenty-seventh session at the United Nations House in Beirut from 7 to 10 May 2012. It convened seven plenary meetings, during which it discussed its agenda items which covered issues of concern to member countries.

99. Stressing the cultural aspect of its development mission, the Commission inaugurated the ministerial segment with a concert by the Orchestra of the Lebanese National Higher Conservatory of Music. The Commission chose to highlight music as it is a fine art that all nations value in their civilization and cultural heritage.

100. The session also marked the launch of ESCWA’s cyberlegislation guidelines.

B. OPENING OF THE SESSION

101. The session was opened in two stages. The senior officials segment was opened on the morning of Monday 7 May 2012, while the ministerial segment was opened on the morning of Wednesday 9 May 2012.

1. Senior officials segment

102. At the opening of the senior officials segment, Ms. Zeina Toukan, Director of the Department of International Cooperation in the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation, Jordan, which had occupied the Chair of the twenty-sixth session of the Commission, made an opening address in which she commended the outstanding efforts of ESCWA that had ensured the overall success of its programmes during the biennium 2010-2011. Despite difficult conditions in the region, ESCWA managed to achieve significant successes in promoting economic and social development, enhancing regional cooperation, and providing technical and advisory assistance to member countries, notably in the areas of ICT, sustainable development, energy, and gender equality. Those successes were a sign of the important role played by ESCWA in supporting member countries and the need to enhance that role as envisioned in the strategic framework for the biennium 2014-2015 in accordance with emerging priorities and ongoing developments.

103. Mr. Nadim Khouri, Deputy of the Under-Secretary-General and Executive Secretary of the Commission, gave an address in which he stressed the need for joint efforts to realize the aspirations of the countries of the region. Exceptional circumstances being undergone by the Arab countries required a redoubling of efforts to move forward the economic and social development process. The twenty-seventh session, with the important programmatic, administrative and organizational issues on its agenda, would be an opportunity for discussions that would contribute to orienting the work of ESCWA during the coming period in accordance with the priorities of member countries.

2. Ministerial segment

104. Mr. Saleh al-Kharabsheh, Secretary-General of the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation, Jordan, representing the Chair of the twenty-sixth session of the Commission, opened the ministerial segment with an address in which he affirmed the role played by ESCWA in promoting economic and social development processes. Achievements of the twenty-sixth session had included providing technical assistance to member countries in the areas of water, energy, and food security, and helping confront the aftermath of the global financial crisis, threats to food and energy security, population growth, and increases in the poverty and unemployment rates that were among the major causes of growing instability in the region. He called for the development of democracy and good governance programmes that involved society in the formulation of its own political and economic future, and for a focus on comprehensive education that in its fullest meaning had direct bearing on economic and social development.

105. His Excellency Mr. Sultan bin Said al-Mansouri, Minister of Economy, the United Arab Emirates, in his capacity as Chair of the twenty-seventh session, delivered an address in which he reviewed the major challenges facing comprehensive and sustainable development in the light of security and political changes occurring in the region, along with perennial problems such as youth unemployment, rising poverty rates, food insecurity, and unsustainable patterns of resource consumption. Such difficult times called for the Arab countries to adopt a new and integrated approach to development that allowed for all groups of society to participate in political and economic life. He noted his country’s experience with comprehensive development, especially its efforts to transform from a petroleum-based economy to a more diversified economy. He closed by proposing the establishment of a regional innovation centre in cooperation with ESCWA whose goal would be the translation of creative new ideas into successful practical projects.

106. Mr. Derek Plumbly, United Nations Special Coordinator for Lebanon, delivered a message from Mr. Ban Ki-moon, Secretary-General of the United Nations. The Secretary-General noted the popular movements being witnessed by the region, through which citizens were demanding democracy, dignity and social justice, and expressing their sense of frustration at the prevailing inequality, corruption, repression and lack of decent employment opportunities. It was imperative to take the difficult decisions needed to answer these legitimate calls for greater rights and freedoms. He commended the decision of ESCWA to focus its current session on the correlation between social justice and sustainable development as a positive contribution to preparations for the Rio+20 Conference, which would provide an opportunity to take bold action to address the interrelated problems of poverty, environmental degradation and scarcity of natural resources.

107. Ms. Rima Khalaf, United Nations Under-Secretary-General and Executive Secretary of ESCWA, delivered an address in which she recalled the circumstances under which the previous session had been held, when the global economic crisis in the West was threatening to undermine achievements that had been decades in the making. The situation was now reversed, with the Arab region producing the newspapers headlines and witnessing promising changes. The countries of the region were recalibrating their economic and social policies towards greater justice, equality of opportunities, and popular participation in decision-making. She cautioned that optimism did not mean that the region was out of danger. The lapse into violence in some countries remained a cause of grave concern, while the oppressive Israeli occupation of Palestine and other Arab lands persisted in violating international law and continued to constitute a perennial threat to the security of all of the countries in the region and their development efforts. She called for swift reforms, and the realization of comprehensive human development rooted in right, justice and the primacy of knowledge.
108. His Excellency Mr. Najib Mikati, the President of the Council of Ministers, Lebanon, under whose auspices the session was being held, delivered an address in which he expressed his gratitude to ESCWA for playing an active role in supporting development in Arab countries, and for launching a regional consultation process to create an Arab consensus in the run-up to the Rio+20 Conference. The fundamental transformations being undergone by the Arab countries were a historic crossroads that was both rife with hope and beset by challenges, and which offered fresh evidence of the link between social justice and sustainable development. He called on the Arab countries to promote collaboration for the benefit of the peoples of the region and for the sake of peace, democracy and social justice, and called on the United Nations to be more even-handed in implementing its resolutions.

C. PARTICIPANTS

109. The session was attended by representatives of the 14 ESCWA member countries. It was also attended by Algeria, Australia, Brazil, Comoros, Japan, Morocco, Romania, Tunisia and Ukraine in the capacity of observers. Other observers included representatives of United Nations programmes, agencies and institutions; international and non-governmental organizations, and other organizations; and a number of experts.
