312 (XXVII) Evaluation of the work of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia

A. TEXT OF THE RESOLUTION

23. In this resolution, the Commission endorsed the recommendations contained in the report on the evaluation of the work of the Commission and requested that they be implemented. It called upon the Executive Secretary to continue efforts to improve the performance of the secretariat through, inter alia, evaluation of the work of the secretariat and review of its internal structure to achieve the highest standards of effectiveness and efficiency. It requested the Executive Secretary to report to the Commission at its twenty-eighth session on the progress made in implementing this resolution.

B. IMPLEMENTATION PROCEDURES

24. ESCWA strived to implement all the recommendations contained in the report on the evaluation of the work of the Commission, enhance intergovernmental mechanisms and strengthen coordination with several United Nations agencies and programmes.

25. ESCWA received the results of the first “performance scorecard” for the biennium 2010-2011 that assessed the evaluation practices of the United Nations Secretariat. Compared to other departments and regional commission, ESCWA was generally rated positively, given that it had clear reporting lines; had adopted an evaluation policy and work plan with monitoring mechanisms and incorporating accountability and lessons learned; and had published the 2010 and 2011 evaluation reports on its website.

26. The scorecard rated ESCWA as making progress in some aspects of its evaluation work, such as absorbing the results of the evaluation and improving the quality of evaluation reports. It also highlighted the following three shortfalls: the budget allocated to evaluation procedures did not exceed 1 per cent of the ESCWA budget; insufficient adoption of the evaluation outcomes to improve results and enhance accountability; and the lack of distinction in the evaluation reporting lines between evaluation processes and planning processes. It should be noted that the results of the evaluation scorecard allowed ESCWA to highlight gaps and make the evaluation process an integral part of its work.

27. The secretariat continued to improve its performance by bridging gaps in the work procedures and institutional structure, allocating the necessary resources and broadening internal evaluation processes to cover its subprogrammes, the Development Account projects, extrabudgetary projects, the Regular Programme of Technical Cooperation and the intergovernmental meetings mechanism. The ESCWA evaluation policy aims to deepen the culture of innovation by adapting to regional changes and benefitting from past experiences.

28. The secretariat reviewed the terms of reference and structure of the Commission in 2013 with a view to ensuring that its work was consistent with the needs of member States. Taking into account the comparative advantage of ESCWA, the review included recommendations on building ESCWA capacities in statistics and macroeconomic modelling and confirmed the great importance of regional integration in all aspects of its work. Those recommendations are being implemented by rearranging the priorities of subprogrammes and redistributing resources.

29. The secretariat also reviewed the internal structure of the Programme Planning and Technical Cooperation Division to increase the effectiveness and consistency of its work. In the light of this evaluation, the Division was restructured to include a new section for monitoring partnerships, mobilizing resources and supporting joint initiatives. It was thus renamed the Planning, Partnership and Technical Cooperation Division. In 2014, the Division initiated a second evaluation to ensure that it was providing adequate strategic support to all ESCWA divisions and organizational units.

30. The secretariat evaluated the performance of sub-programme 2 on social development and subprogramme 4 on information and communication technology for regional integration. On the basis of these evaluations, the Social Development Division and the Information and Communication Technology Division prepared detailed and time-bound work plans to implement the recommendations of the evaluations.

31. The secretariat also evaluated four Development Account projects in the following areas: participatory development; cyber legislation; formulation of social policy for young people; and bilateral investments.

32. The secretariat prepared an ambitious evaluation plan for the biennium 2014-2015 that includes the evaluation of at least two subprogrammes and various priority thematic areas. ESCWA will also develop evaluation plans for seven Development Account projects and five extrabudgetary projects whose activities should be completed within the biennium. It is also planning to evaluate the Regular Programme of Technical Cooperation. It will work with the United Nations Evaluation Group to improve and develop policies and guidelines for the ESCWA evaluation process; develop practical and time-bound work plans that meet the recommendations of the various evaluation processes; and ensure a systematic approach to implementing the recommendations of past evaluations. ESCWA will also strive to incorporate lessons learned in future planning and programming, guarantee more accountability with regard to results and widen the network of independent evaluation experts.
