INTRODUCTION

1. The nineteenth session of the Commission was held at the ministerial level in accordance with the decision taken by the Commission in its resolution 196 (XVII) of 31 May 1994 on the frequency of sessions of the Commission and the Technical Committee. Paragraph 2 of the resolution reads as follows:

"[The Commission] Decides also that Commission sessions shall be held in odd years, starting in 1995, in conformity with the budget session of the United Nations and with the cycle to monitor the progress achieved in the programmes of work of the system."

2. The present report, which covers the activities of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) since its eighteenth session, held in Beirut from 22 to 25 May 1995, was adopted unanimously by the Commission at its 3rd meeting, held in Beirut on 8 May 1997.

3. It was the intention of the secretariat to focus attention on the essential points of the discussions; consequently, the report on the session reflects the most important issues taken up, briefly summarizing the discussions that took place on each agenda item but not including detailed presentations of the views expressed by individual representatives.
I. ISSUES CALLING FOR ACTION BY THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

4. At its final plenary meeting, held on 7 May 1997, the Commission adopted a number of resolutions and decided to submit them to the Economic and Social Council for action. The texts of the resolutions are as follows:

Aware also of the importance of the integration of transport networks with a view to contributing to the acceleration of regional cooperation processes,

214 (XIX). Establishment of a technical committee on liberalization of foreign trade and economic globalization in the countries of the ESCWA region

The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia,

Conscious that the steadily growing trend towards the liberalization of foreign trade and economic globalization, the conclusion of a series of multilateral trade agreements within the framework of the World
Trade Organization and the emergence of a large number of economic blocs will transform the international trading system in the future,

Conscious also of the growing interest of the States members of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in the World Trade Organization and the desire of many of them to join it, and of the importance of defining the positions of the countries of the region and coordinating those positions with respect to the issues involved,

Taking into consideration the appreciation shown by member States for the efforts made by the ESCWA secretariat in this area, both alone and in cooperation with specialized international organizations,

Aware of the importance of defining the issues that represent concerns of the States members of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia within the new areas that will be discussed in future trade negotiations, such as trade and environment, trade and investment and trade and competition, and the impact that those areas will have on the economic development of the countries of the region,

Inspired by the efforts made by numerous other regional groups in terms of research and studies conducted in those areas and coordination of their positions at the regional level,

1. Decides to establish a technical committee on liberalization of foreign trade and economic globalization in the countries of the ESCWA region, made up of representatives of the member States who are specialized in this field, to undertake the following tasks:

II. WORK OF THE COMMISSION SINCE THE EIGHTEENTH SESSION

A. ACTIVITIES OF SUBSIDIARY BODIES

5. The Standing Committee for the Programme was established as the main subsidiary organ of the Commission pursuant to Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA)\(^5\) resolution 114 (IX) of 12 May 1982 on the ECWA medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989. Pursuant to ECWA resolution 125 (XI) of 26 April 1984 on the general policy-making structure of the Commission, the Standing Committee for the Programme was designated the Technical Committee, and its terms of reference were expanded to include the examination of items on the agenda of the sessions of the Commission.

6. The tenth session of the Technical Committee was held in Beirut on 5 and 6 May 1997. Pursuant to ESCWA resolution 179 (XVI) of 2 September 1992, a second subsidiary body of ESCWA, the Statistical Committee, was created. This Committee held its first session, in which heads of statistical offices took part, from 6 to 9 November 1995; the second session was held from 24 to 26 February 1997. The report of the Executive Secretary on the activities of the Commission entitled “Report on the work of the Statistical Committee at its second session” (E/ESCWA/C.1/19/4(Parl I)/Add.6) covers the activities of this Committee during its second session.

7. The Committee on Social Development was established by ESCWA resolution 198 (XVII) of 31 May 1994. The Committee held its first session on 25 and 26 March 1997 rather than in 1995, as had been originally decided, owing to the lack of available funds for that purpose in the programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995. The report of the Executive Secretary entitled “Recommendations of the Statistical Committee and the Committee on Social Development” (E/ESCWA/C.1/19/6) contains information on the first session of the Committee on Social Development, including four sets of recommendations.\(^6\)

8. In addition, ESCWA resolution 204 (XVIII) of 25 May 1995 on the establishment of a committee on energy in the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia provided for the holding of meetings of that committee every two years starting in 1996; however, owing to budgetary constraints, the first meeting was postponed and is now scheduled to be held in September 1997.

9. The secretariat held the first session of the Committee on Water Resources in Amman on 30 March 1997. ESCWA resolution 205 (XVIII) of 25 May 1995 on the establishment of a committee on water resources in the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia had originally provided for the Committee to start meeting in 1996. The Executive Secretary’s “Report on the first session of the Committee on Water Resources” (E/ESCWA/C.1/19/4(Parl I)/Add.2) covers the activities of that first session.

B. OTHER ACTIVITIES

C. OPENING OF THE SESSION

21. The nineteenth session of the Commission was held under the patronage of His Excellency Mr. Elias Hraoui, President of the Lebanese Republic, who kindly agreed to open the session.

22. The President of the Lebanese Republic, in his opening statement, expressed his confidence in the future of the region and in its capacity for advancement. He stressed that every country within the Arab family or within the region of Western Asia could boast abundant capacities and potential in geological, political, economic and social terms, as well as in terms of both human and natural resources, and that the current challenge was to determine how those countries could best cooperate for the good of the region and in support of the fundamental values shared by the countries therein.

23. He stressed that the end of the century had brought fundamental changes in the region and major upheavals worldwide, such as the end of the cold war, the decline of bipolarity and the aggravation of social and economic problems, all of which led to the firm conviction that economic and social development constituted the proper approach to achieving genuine stability. He further emphasized that the growing worldwide interdependence in recent years had highlighted the need for cooperation and coordination on all sides as a means of dealing with the crises of the times, in which all were concerned.

24. He underscored the need to adhere firmly to the United Nations and its Charter: indeed, the Organization had played an important role in the past half-century in peace-keeping, preventing wars, facilitating economic and social development, ensuring respect for human rights and protecting the environment. It was essential for the Organization to follow the path of justice and impartiality, working towards the establishment of peace in the region through the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967), 338 (1973) and 425 (1978).

25. In that connection, President Hraoui emphasized that cooperation and joint responsibility in coping with the problems of the modern world required the jettisoning of partiality and bias in dealing with major issues. That was particularly true in the case of the countries of Western Asia. There was now a pressing need for integration, which the organs and regional commissions of the United Nations, including ESCWA, must strive to bring about.

26. ESCWA played a major role in promoting economic development and in ensuring the economic and social stability that must be considered the cornerstone of political stability. The current political struggle in the Middle East should stimulate greater initiatives on the part of the member States. The programmes being carried out by ESCWA were contributing to the modernization of its member countries.

27. The Arab States had faced major challenges before peace; with peace those challenges would multiply, especially in the fields of water resources, communications and communication networks, and economic partnerships. Most of the ESCWA member States were parties to international agreements and covenants and were joining international organizations such as the World Trade Organization and the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership. President Hraoui stressed the need for the establishment of an Arab common market.

28. In concluding his statement, President Hraoui said that the current ESCWA meeting in Beirut was a reflection of the full international confidence in Lebanon. He stated that Lebanon wished to place on record its appreciation of the cooperation and advisory services that had been extended to it by ESCWA in a number of fields. Lebanon looked forward to taking part in the Commission’s Silver Jubilee session, to be held in 1999. Lebanon was confident that in Beirut ESCWA would gain a new impetus that would infuse regional cooperation with a creative spirit to enable the region to meet the challenges of the twenty-first century.

29. The Executive Secretary of ESCWA made a statement in which he expressed thanks to the President, the Government and the people of Lebanon for the kind efforts exerted to furnish ESCWA with state-of-the-art headquarters. He also expressed his deep gratitude to the Government of Iraq and the Government of Jordan for the generous hospitality afforded to ESCWA in those two countries.

30. He said that the twentieth century, which was drawing to a close, had revealed the ugliest, cruellest and most selfish aspects of the human soul, and yet at the same time, its inherent forces of good and the tremendous capacity of mankind for progress and stability. The twentieth century had left behind a heavy legacy in which the ugliest manifestations of inhumanity appeared side by side with the noblest achievements and examples of virtue. It had truly been a century of extreme contradictions. As for the mingling of good and evil, the century had perhaps not been unlike earlier ages; what distinguished it, however, were the forms of inhuman behaviour and the proportions of the disasters that had characterized it, exceeding anything imaginable. The century had combined the highest manifestations of civilization with the deadliest and most hideous of wars: it had been a century of savage cruelty, of economic exploitation and the squandering of resources, of political corruption, of the spread of narcotics and crime, and of the improper distribution of wealth and income.

31. Despite all this, the twentieth century had seen the most extraordinary advances in civilization, with scientific achievements that defied the imagination. The century had been marked by manifestations of cooperation and voluntary and charitable activities that made it, at least in some respects, a time of progress and advancement. There had been advances in medical science and communications; most people lived better and lived longer; and the constraints of time and place had been reduced, turning the world into one great global village. In the moral and social spheres, the century had been marked by liberation, independence and self-determination, at least in theory. It had also witnessed the beginning of the age of international organizations: the League of Nations, the United Nations and international institutions designed to regulate financial and economic dealings. In sum, though the century had been characterized by the most abominable forms of human oppression, it had also witnessed the noblest expressions of solidarity and voluntary action, as well as the recognition of the unity and common fate of the inhabitants of the planet.

32. The Executive Secretary said that in spite of everything, the twenty-first century would be greeted with hope. The United Nations, as a framework for the international order, could not remain aloof from world developments, for it was an organic entity whose capacity and vitality depended on its adapting and adjusting to conditions and on its providing leadership and guidance for the very creation of those conditions. Hence the watchword “reform”—a concept easier to recognize the need for than to define. It was for that reason, moreover, that the Secretary-General, upon assuming office, had taken pains to stress his firm intention to proceed with reform as a cumulative, ongoing process proceeding along two parallel lines: one involving administrative and organizational measures, the other relating to structural changes. The Secretary-General would submit his ideas on the question to the General Assembly at its special session to be held in July 1997. The Executive Secretary stated that the reform of the United Nations would raise a number of issues that were likely to affect the role of the regional commissions. That role was fundamental in the area of support to regional cooperation; furthermore, the existence of the regional commissions gave the United Nations a presence close to the events taking place, thus enabling it to be more aware of the particularities of each area or region. In addition, the regional commissions of the United Nations ensured coordination and cooperation with other regional organizations so as to make sure that regional trends were not in conflict with universal values.

33. The Executive Secretary turned to the questions raised in connection with the reform of the Organization that were likely to affect the activities of the regional commissions. There was an ongoing debate over the distinction between United Nations bodies that carried out analytical activities and those that engaged in activities in the field. As for the regional commissions, they were not centres of theoretical research, but rather technical assistance organs that worked in the service of the member States and offered a forum for the coordination of their economic and social policies. Such service could not be provided in an optimal way unless analytical work was integrated with work in the field. The role and activity of the regional commissions would be affected by what ultimately took place in the way of reform of the Organization in terms of allocation of responsibilities, degree of centralization or decentralization of the work of the various organizations, and forms and methods of coordination. Since its sixteenth session, ESCWA had adopted a number of measures with a view to the restructuring of the Commission and a review of work priorities, taking into account worldwide and regional changes. The twentieth session of the Commission would coincide with its twenty-fifth anniversary, by which time the Commission would have moved and settled—by the grace of God—in its permanent headquarters in Beirut. That would also coincide with the end of a century and the dawn of a new millennium. The Executive Secretary called for the celebration of the event in a manner that befitted such a glorious occasion, particularly in view of the fact that the Secretary-General had expressed great interest in that event as well as his willingness to take part in it personally.

D. MAIN TOPICS OF DISCUSSION AND RESULTS

1. Discussion and adoption of the final report of the Technical Committee on its tenth session
   (Agenda item 6)

34. Before proceeding to the discussion of the final report of the Technical Committee, the representatives of the member States took the decision that the statement of His Excellency Mr. Elias Hraoui, President of the Lebanese Republic would be considered an official document of the session.

35. The Rapporteur of the Technical Committee presented the final report of that Committee on its tenth session (E/ESCWA/C.1/19/14), held on 5 and 6 May 1996. The Executive Secretary reviewed the main features of the report, including the changes that had taken place in the focus and working methods of ESCWA. The representatives of the member States adopted the report of the Technical Committee, whose recommendations were translated into resolutions which, following approval by the Economic and Social Council, would be implemented by the secretariat. The representatives of the member States stressed the following points:

(a) The fact that ESCWA was a regional organization whose mandate was based on the Charter and general focus of the United Nations, though the Commission must take into consideration the particularities and interests of the region in translating that focus into concrete activities;

(b) The need for ESCWA, in dealing with economic and social issues, to adapt internationally applied methods, indicators, standards and measuring tools in such a way as to give an accurate picture of the individual economic and social features of its member States;

(c) The need for greater interaction between the secretariat and the organs concerned in the member States so as to assist the Commission in fulfilling its technical role of coordination, which was based on the common interests of its members and ensured an effective impact on regional and international policies that had a bearing on the interests of the member States;

(d) The need to accord priority to practical issues when helping member States to adapt to regional and international developments, through the development of the activities of the secretariat in the field of technical cooperation;

(e) The need to increase and develop the participation of those in charge of specialized areas in the member countries, together with the experts of the secretariat, in all the planning and implementation phases of the studies included in the programme of work so as to ensure that such studies genuinely reflected the needs and interests of the member States.
2. Programme and organizational changes and modifications made by ESCWA since 1994 (Agenda item 7)

36. The Executive Secretary presented the issues reviewed in his note entitled “Programme and organizational changes and modifications made by ESCWA since 1994” (E/ESCWA/19/5), highlighting the following points:

(a) The most important steps taken by the secretariat with a view to its restructuring, including the conversion of 15 sectoral subprogrammes to 5 thematic subprogrammes; the according of priority to multidisciplinary activities; reduction of the activities of sections dealing with issues dealt with by other organizations within the United Nations; changes in organizational structure in keeping with the new focus of the secretariat; the strengthening of interaction with member States through the Advisory Committee; meetings with representatives of the ESCWA member States at United Nations Headquarters in New York; and coordination with United Nations organizations through the Regional Inter-Agency Coordination Group;

(b) The report of the Office of Inspections and Investigations to the effect that the secretariat had complied with the Office’s recommendations on restructuring;

(c) The holding of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on the Role and the Future of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, involving participants from the region with a broad knowledge of regional affairs, for the purpose of assessing the work of ESCWA from the standpoint of the reforms carried out. The participants in the Meeting expressed satisfaction with the Commission’s basic orientations.

3. Current issues of importance to the ESCWA region (ESCWA resolution 119 (X)):
concerns of the ESCWA member States regarding the World Trade Organization, the related agreements and future trade negotiations
(Agenda item 8)

37. The secretariat made a brief presentation on the establishment of the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the importance of the related agreements (E/ESCWA/19/6). During the discussion of the document, the Executive Secretary pointed out that the goal of ESCWA in that regard was to assist member States in their dealings with WTO in such a way as to safeguard their interests.

38. In the opinion of one delegation, dealing with the World Trade Organization was not an easy matter, owing to the conditions imposed on countries desirous of becoming members and entering into agreements. It added that, in dealing with WTO, one must be guided by the need to prevail upon it to change its approach, particularly in a monopolar international system, and that the ESCWA member countries were characterized by a variety of concerns.

39. The secretariat pointed out that ESCWA could play a role in serving the interests of the region in that regard by providing advice on joining the World Trade Organization and working to establish a uniform, integrated concept of the relationship with that organization.
40. The Executive Secretary, referring to agenda item 9, said that Economic and Social Council resolution 1994/43 provided for Beirut to be the permanent headquarters of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia. He highlighted a number of important points that deserved attention and examination: the Lebanese Government had initially offered El-Murr Tower to house the Commission’s headquarters but had subsequently chosen a second site, which was being prepared exclusively for that purpose. The secretariat had therefore deemed it appropriate to ask the Office of Legal Affairs of the United Nations for an opinion regarding that change. The Office of Legal Affairs reported that the decision had pertained to the relocation of ESCWA to the city of Beirut, without reference to any building, and that it would suffice if the building satisfied the requisite conditions and specifications to enable the Commission to perform its tasks.

41. The secretariat had informed the Government of Lebanon to that effect, and the Government had accordingly presented the sketches and plans for a new building, which would be owned by the SOLIDERE Company. The Government of Lebanon had requested the secretariat to submit the requirements and specifications that would meet the conditions imposed by the United Nations. The secretariat had done so. The Government of Lebanon had submitted to the secretariat the lease concluded between the Government and SOLIDERE, together with all the related contracts. The secretariat had sent those documents to the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs for examination with a view to the preparation of the headquarters agreement and the supplementary agreement on the building, so as to ensure the uninterrupted performance of the Commission’s work. The Office of Legal Affairs had prepared a draft headquarters agreement and a supplementary agreement concerning the building, both of which had been sent to the Government of Lebanon for examination. It was agreed that a delegation would be sent by the Office of Legal Affairs to discuss the two agreements with the Government of Lebanon at the end of May 1997. In addition, the building security plan had been sent to the United Nations Secretariat in New York for study, and a representative of the Security and Safety Service was to be sent to Beirut within a few days to discuss the plan and ascertain the soundness of the building and of measures and provisions for safety in accordance with United Nations requirements. When those steps were satisfactorily completed, the relocation would take place once the building had been equipped to make it fit for use, the necessary legal agreements had been signed, and the required financial resources for carrying out the move had been provided.

42. At the same time, the secretariat had proceeded to prepare the necessary plans for the move in such a way as to avoid disrupting the execution of the Commission’s programmes of work and to take into account the needs of its staff from every point of view, in the manner set out in the note by the Executive Secretary entitled “Progress made in facilitating the move of ESCWA to its permanent headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon” (E/ESCWA/19/7).

43. Following these explanatory remarks, the Executive Secretary expressed his gratitude and appreciation for the efforts being made by the Government of Lebanon in spite of the difficult conditions under which it was currently operating.
5. Call for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission, to be held in conjunction with the twentieth session of ESCWA in 1999, and discussion of the role of the Commission in the coming century in view of international and regional developments (Agenda item 10)

44. The Executive Secretary reviewed the content of his note calling for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Commission (E/ESCWA/19/8), and said that he had discussed the matter with the Secretary-General, who had indicated his willingness to participate in the event.

45. The participants in the session welcomed the Executive Secretary’s call for a celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Commission. They expressed the hope that the event would be not only a celebration, but a new starting-point for the Commission. They stressed the need for a study to be carried out on the role of ESCWA in the twenty-first century; an assessment of regional economic cooperation; and the issuance of a declaration embodying the Commission’s vision of the future and its role in coordinating the policies of the member States in the economic and social spheres and broadening cooperation between them.

6. Date and venue of the twentieth session of the Commission (Agenda item 11)

46. The Commission decided that the twentieth session of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia should be held in Beirut at such time as would be determined by the secretariat in consultation with the Government of Lebanon.

7. Adoption of the report of the Commission on its nineteenth session (Agenda item 13)

47. The Commission adopted the report on its twentieth session after the agreed amendments had been made thereto.
